INTRODUCTION

TO THE

FIRST EDITION.

HERE having been a great Number of Publications concerning the Art of Cookery, it may perhaps be thought unnecessary to produce another book on the subject-yet, I trust that, upon examination, this work will appear of more real utility than may be at first imagined. There are many books of RECEIPTS, but I have never met with one that contained any instructions for Regulating a Table.—The great inconvenience I have experienced, on commencing mistress of a family, from the want of such assistance, has since prompted me to attempt a set of bills of fare, which, I flatter myself, will be of great use to ladies in general, but particularly to the younger part of my sex, who, on their entering into life, may not have acquired those advantages which arise from instruction or some practice, and who are sometimes at a loss how to conduct their table with that decency and propriety, which are much to be desired, not only in making dinners for company, but in a family like-WI C

It is certain, that a woman never appears to greater advantage than at the head of a well-regulated table, which should be always so supplied, that the unexpected visit of a friend, or even of a stranger, should occasion no inconvenience or confusion. If a dinner be small and simple, the manner of serving it will make it appear to great advantage; and, I think, I may venture to say, that with the assistance of the bills of fare herein inserted, and with the variety which every person of moderate taste will be able to introduce, a table may be so conducted as to be of credit to the taste and management of the mistress.

In regard to the RECEIPTS—They are selected with great care from the manuscripts of an experienced housekeeper; they are not expensive, yet, I may with certainty affirm, they will prove excellent in their kind, if followed with exactness and attention; and I have given necessary instructions for a servant in a plain way, that, by application, if she has a common genius and a good palate, she may be made capable of any cook's place.

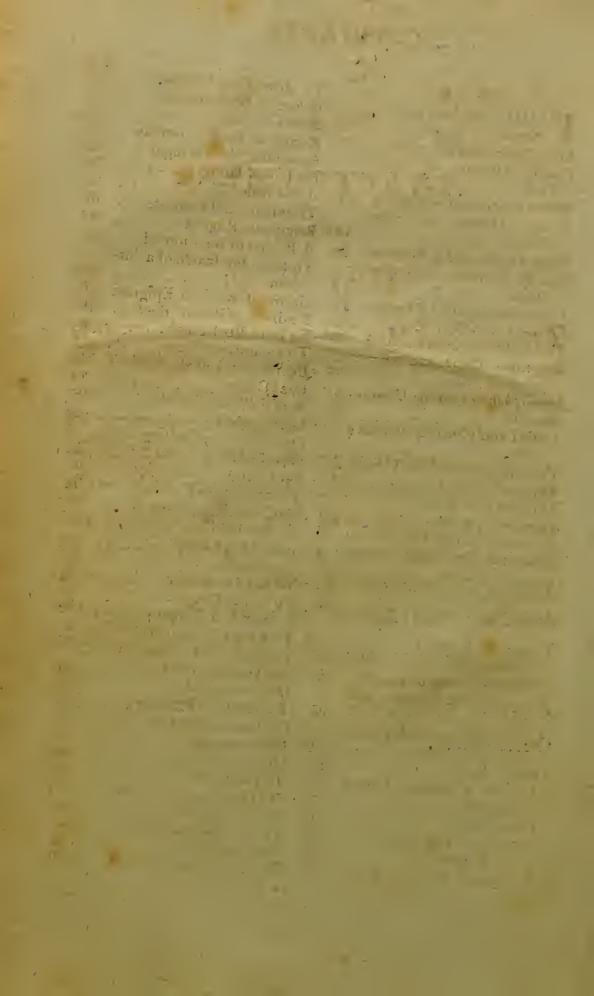

I shall only add, to recommend this publication, my hope that the pains taken will be found to answer the end proposed.

SIXTH EDITION.

TO THE

THE Editor of Mrs. MASON's BOOK of COOKERY, most grateful for the very favourable reception it has been particularly honoured with; presents A NEW EDI-TION, in forming which every attention has been exerted to render it complete as possible to the present time.— Many modern and desirable Receipts are added—The articles of the Appendix to the former Editions are inserted in their proper places of the Work—A full Table of Contents is at the beginning—and at the ena, is added a copious Index of the whole—from which, the LADY'S ASSISTANT, BY MRS. MASON, IS THE MOST COMPLETE HOUSEKEEPER'S COMPANION, AND YOUNG MARRIED LADY'S BEST GUIDE FOR HER TABLE, hitherto extant,

THE

LADY'S ASSISTANT

Directions how to choose Beef.

THE flefh of ox-beef, if young, will have a time open fmooth grain, of a bright red, and very tender; the fuet very white: if it is yellow, it is not good.—Cow-beef, the grain is clofer, the fat whiter, but the lean not fo bright a red.—Bullbeef is of a ftill clofer grain; the fat is fkinny, and hard, the lean of a deep red, and it has a much ftronger fcent than any other beef.

DIFFERENT PIECES OF AN OX.

Fore Quarter.

SHIN, clod, sticking-piece, leg of mutton-piece, fore-rib, middle-rib, chuck, blade-bone, marrow-bones, brifket.

Hind Quarter.

LEG, fmall round or mouse buttock, the round or middle buttock, thick flank, thin flank, veiny piece, haunch-bone, rump, and tirloin.

The Head.

Tongue.

SKIRT, heart, fweetbreads, kidneys, fillet, liver, and the tripe, which is distinguished by the names of the double, the roll, and the reed-tripe; and the feet.

General Directions for Boiling, &c.

As neatnefs is a most material requisite in a kitchen, be particularly careful to keep all the utenfils pertectly clean, the pots and faucepans well tinned, or lined with filver; let all meat boil gently, and always use fost water, if to be had: put the meat into the veffel while the water is cold, unless it is not falt enough (if beef or pork) then put it into hot, or boiling water; be fure always to let the veffel be large enough, that the meat may be well covered with water; cover the pot, to prevent the foot dropping into it, and fo close that the fmoke from the fire does not get under the edge of the cover; when it boils, never neglect to take off the fcum, as that not being attended to, fpoils the look of the meat—fome shake a fmall handful of flour upon the water, which takes up all the fcum—and others pour a little cold water in, when the bot boils, to make the fcum rife.

General Directions for Roafting.

AS foon as the meat is put to the fire, pour over it fome warm water, which throw away; this is very neceffary to those who are nice in the dreffing their meat, it being a good deal handled in the fpitting; thake fome flour over it, bafte it with butter, and do not put it too near the fire: this, with frequently bafting it, a brifk fire, and allowing time enough, are the only means of roafting in perfection: when the steam draws to the fire, the meat is near done: flour and baste it just before it is sent to table, that it may have a nice froth : always allow a longer time for the meat to roaft in frosty weather: take particular care to have the fpit clean, as nothing is more difagreeable than a fpit mark; and remember, when the meat is half done, to remove the dripping-pan and fpit a little from the fire, and ftir it : if it is a good fire before the meat is laid down, once ftirring it will in general' roaft a joint of meat. Never falt the meat before it is put to the fire, it draws out the gravy too much : if it is to be kept fome time before it is dreffed, as indeed mutton and beef are not good fresh killed, be fure to dry it well with a cloth, and hang it where it will have a thorough air; look at it every day, and wipe off all the damp; it will keep a long time: fome pepper it a little.

Boiled Beef.

BEEF must be boiled according to the different pieces: a round, or a haunch-bone, ought not to be thoroughly boiled, as they make good bubble and fqueak, if under-done, or the infide of a round will make a good pie; a middling-fized round will take three hours: brifket and inferior pieces ought to be very well boiled. For fauce—cabbage, favoys, any fort of greens, carrots, or turnips.

To boil a Rumpof Beef, relified.

CUT a very large handful of fweet herbs very finall, mix with them fome common falt and pepper, a finall quantity of faltpetre; rub the beef all over with thefe ingredients, let it lie four days, but not longer; put it into a pot with a large quantity of water, and put in with it four onions cut in quarters, a bunch of carrots, four bay-leaves, a large bunch of fweet herbs, a handful of parfley, five or fix cloves, fome whole pepper, and a little falt; boil it well, and as the fcum rifes take it off: do not put any of the roots into the difh with it, only firew fome freth parfley. This is a very good way of dreffing it; the herbs it is rubbed with give it a good flavour.

Roaft Beef.

A PIECE of ten pounds will take about an hour and a half; of twenty pounds, three hours, if thick; two hours and a half, if thin: put a piece of buttered paper on the outfide, it prevents the fkin from fhrinking. For fauce—falad, pickles, potatoes, brocoli, cucumbers raw or ftewed, celery raw or ftewed, French beans, cauliflowers.

To bake a Leg of Beef.

TAKE a large deep pan, and lay your beef at the bottom; then put in a little piece of bacon, a flice or two of carrot, fome mace, cloves, black and white whole pepper, a large onion cut in flices, and a bundle of fweet herbs: pour in water till the meat be covered, and fend it to the oven covered up. When it is baked, ftrain it through a coarfe fieve; take out all the finews and fat, and put them into a faucepan, with a few fpoonfuls of the gravy, a little red wine, a fmall piece of butter rolled in flour, and fome muftard; fhake your faucepan often, and when the fauce is hot and thick, difh it up, and fend it to table.

To Stew Beef.

TAKE a pound and a half of the fat part of the brifket, with four pounds of flewing beef, cut into pieces; put thefe into a flew-pan, with a little falt, fome pepper, a bunch of fweet herbs, an onion fluck with cloves, two or three pieces of carrot, two quarts of water, and half a pint of good fmall beer; let it flew four hours, then take fome turnips and carrots cut into pieces, a fmall-leek, two or three heads of celery cut fmall, a piece of bread toafted hard; let thefe flew all together one hour more, then pour all into a turcen, and ferve it up.

To fiew a Rump of Beef.

TAKE a rump, and roaft it till it is half done, then put it into a large pot with three pints of water, one pint of fmall beer, one pint of red wine, fome falt, three or four fpoonfuls of vinegar, two fpoonfuls of ketchup, beaten mace, a bunch of fweet herbs, an onion fluck with cloves, a little chyan pepper; let it flew very gently till it is very tender; it will take about two hours; when it is enough, take it up, and lay it in a deep difh: fcum the fat off very carefully, and ftrain the gravy; put in a few pickled mufhrooms, truffles, morels, and oyfters, if agreeable; it is very good without: thicken the gravy, and pour over the beef.

To stew Beef Gobbets.

TAKE a piece of beef, not too lean, nor too fat, cut it into pieces, the fize of a large egg, put them into a flew-pan, and juft cover them with water; let them flew an hour, fcum them very clean, then put in fome falt, and fome whole pepper, cloves, and mace, tied in a bit of muflin, fome celery and carrots, turnips pared and cut into flices, a bunch of fweet herbs, and a large cruft of bread, a little red wine, according to the quantity that is wanted; cover them clofe, and let them flew till they are tender; take out the fpices and the bread, and have a French roll ready fried and cut into four, to put into them when they are fent to table.

A Leg of Beef stewed.

CUT it into pieces, put to it a bunch of fweet herbs, two large onions, fix or eight cloves, a carrot or two, a turnip, a head of celery, fome black pepper, a quart of beer, and water enough to cover the meat; flew it in an earthen veffel fix or feven hours; take out the meat, fcum the liquor; put to it celery ready boiled and cut into pieces, carrots cut to pieces and boiled, and turnips in balls, a little chyan. Or thicken fome of the liquor with flour, boil it up a few minutes (a little red wine, not much) pick out the finews, and as much of the meat as is wanted, put it into the fauce, ferve it in a deep difh.

Beef A-la-mode ..

TAKE fome of the round of beef, the veiny piece, or fmall round (what is generally called the moufe-buttock) cut it five or fix inches thick, cut fome pieces of fat bacon into long bits; take an equal quantity of beaten mace, pepper, and nutmeg, with double the quantity of falt, if wanted; mix them together, dip the bacon into fome vinegar (garlic vinegar, if agreeable) then into the fpice, lard the beef with a larding-pin, very thick and even, put the meat into a pot juft big enough to hold it, with a gill of vinegar, two large onions, a bunch of fweet herbs, half a pint of red wine, fome lemon-peel: cover it down very clofe, and put a wet cloth round the edge of the pot, to prevent the fteam evaporating; when it is half done turn it, and cover it up again; do it over a ftove, or a very flow fire: it will take five hours and a half before it is done.

N. B. Truffies and morels may be added to it.

Another Way.

CUT fome of the round of beef into pieces, lard and fry them, put to them fome beef-broth, a bunch of fweet herbs, an onion, a few pepper-corns and cloves; flew this gently till tender, covered clofe; fcum off the fat, add a few fresh mushrooms.

N. B. Water may be used instead of broth.

Rump of Beef A-la-mode.

BONE it, lard it with bacon, make a fluffing with breadcrumbs, parfley, and fweet herbs chopped, a little efchalot, nutmeg, pepper, falt, lemon-peel grated, fuet chopped, and yolk of egg; fluff the part where the bone came out, and here and there in the lean; fkewer it and bind it with a tape: bake or flew it with a pint of red wine and a quart of water; take out the meat, fcum the fauce, thicken it with a little flour; add morels, pickled mufhrooms, or lemon-juice. It eats very well cold, or may be cut into flices and fried, toffed up in fome of the fauce (thickened with flour) with oyfters and ketchup.

A-la-mode^ede Portugal.

'TAKE a finall rump of beef, fry the thin part of it brown in butter; make a fluffing with fome onions, boiled chefnuts, an anchovy, fome chyan pepper, falt, and nutmeg; fluff the thick part of the rump, and flew it in fome flrong beef-gravy till it is tender, then take it up; keep it hot, firain off the gravy, put to it fome browning (for made-difhes), fome pickled cucumbers, capers chopped, and a little lemon-juice; give it a boil, cut the fried meat in two, lay it on each fide the ftew, and pour the gravy over it.

Bæuf A-la-daube.

TAKE a round, a rump, or a veiny piece of beef, lard it with bacon, half-roaft it, or fry it brown; put it into a flewpan or a pot that will juft hold it, fome gravy, an onion fluck with cloves, half a pint of white wine, a gill of vinegar, a bunch of fweet herbs, pepper, cloves, mace, and falt; cover it down very clofe, let it but juft fimmer till it is tender : take two ox-palates, two fweetbreads, truffles, morels, artichokebottoms, flew them all together in fome gravy, and pour over the beef : have ready fome forced-meat balls fried, make fome long, others round, dip fome fippets into batter, fry and cut them three-corner ways, and flick them into the meat; lay the balls round the difh.

A-la-royale.

BONE a rump, firloin, or brifket, and cut fome holes in it at a little diftance from each other; fill the holes, one with chopt oyfters, another with fat bacon, and the other with chopt parfley; dip each of these, before the beef is stuffed, into a feafoning made with falt, pepper, beaten mace, nutmeg, grated lemon peel, fweet marjorum, and thyme; put a piece of butter into a frying-pan, and when it has done hiffing, put in the beef, make it of a fine brown, then put it into fome broth made of the bones, with a bay-leaf, a pint of red wine, two anchovies, and a quarter of a pint of fmall beer; cover it clofe, and let it ftew till it is tender ; then take out the beef, fcum off. the fat, firain the gravy; add two ox-palates flewed tender and cut into pieces, some pickled gerkins, truffies, morels, and a little mushroom powder; let all these boil together: thicken the fauce with a bit of butter rolled in flour, put in the beef to warm, pour the fauce over it, and ferve it up.

Tremblant.

CUT a fmall rump of beef very neatly, fo as to lay flat in the dish, let it hang according as the weather will permit, bind it about with a fillet, put it into a pot with water enough to cover it, about a pint of Madeira, an onion fluck with cloves, a piece of lemon-peel, a bunch of sweet herbs, fome whole pepper; let it flew gently for as long a time as it will hang together; take out the beef, fcuin the fauce very clean, firft ftrained; have fome carrots, firft half-boiled and cut in flips an inch long, then flewed in about a pint of cullis, with fmall onions or efchalot minced, chopped parfley, and a little tarragon; add to this as much of the liquor the beef was flewed in as will make fauce enough, more wine if neceffary, and a little juice of lemon; wipe the meat, take off the tape, pour the fauce over it when it has boiled up a minute or two. If it is defigned for a fide dith, cut the meat to a proportionable fize.

Ecarlate.

TAKE a brifket, or the thick part of the thin flank, rub it over well with fome falt-petre beat fmall, then take half a pound of coarfe fugar, a pound of common falt, two ounces of bay falt, mix it all together, and rub it well on the beef; turn it every day, and let it lie twelve days or a fortnight.

It eats very good cold, with a weight laid upon it, and then cut into flices.

Rump au Ragout.

CUT the meat from the bone, flour and fry it, pour over it a little boiling water, about a pint of fmall beer; add a carrot or two, an onion fluck with cloves, fome whole pepper, falt, a piece of lemon-peel, a bunch of fweet herbs; let thefe flew an hour, then add fome good gravy; when the meat is tender take it out, ftrain the fauce, thicken it with a little flour; add a little celery ready boiled, a little ketchup; put in the meat, juft fimmer it up. Or the celery may be omitted, and the ragout enriched by adding mufhrooms freih or pickled, artichoke-bottoms boiled and guartered, and hard yolks of eggs.

To enrich them, add pickled muthrooms, hard yolks of eggs, and forced-meat balls.

Beef- Collops Stewed.

CUT the collops as Scotch collops; they are good from the thick flank, but more fo from the middle of the rump; beat them with a rolling-pin, put them into a flew-pan with a little water, a glafs of white wine, two efchalots flored, a little grated lemon-peel, a little dried marjorum rubbed to pieces, fome falt and pepper (remember to have fome fat cut to the collops), fet them over a quick fire until the pan is full of gravy, turn them, and they will be done in ten minutes; fome mufhroom pickle may be added, if it is liked; they are eat with pickles. The infide of a firloin of beef after it is roafted may be done the fame way.

Beef hashed.

BOIL a little beer and water, with an efchalot, two or three cloves, and a bit of lemon-peel; firain it, cut the beef thin, and flour it; add pepper, falt, a little ketchup, and gatlic vinegar; fimmer thefe together, fliaking the pan round, then put in the meat; make it quite hot, but do not let it boil; add what gravy may have run from the meat. Garnifh with pickles and toafted bread.

The Dutch way of falting Beef.

TAKE a lean piece of beef and rub it well with brown fugar (fome pour treacle over it) let' it lie at leaft two days, turning it very often; then wipe it, and falt it with common falt and falt-petre, beat the falt-petre fine, rub it well in, and turn it every day for fourteen or fifteen days, then roll it very tight in a coarfe cloth, and prefs it down with a large weight; hang it to dry in a chimney, but turn it the bottom upwards every day; then boil it in pump-water: it will cut into fhivers like Dutch Beef.

Hung Beef.

THE proper piece is that called the navel-piece: it muft be hung up in a cellar until it is a little damp, but not long enough to change; take it down, and wafh it very well in brown fugar and water, dry it with a cloth, cut it into two or three pieces; take half a pound of brown fugar, two pounds of bay-falt dried and pounded fmall, fix ounces of falt-petre dried and beat fine, rub it well into the beef, then ftrew common falt all over it, as much as will make it falt enough; let it lie together ten days, changing the pieces from the bottom to the top; hang it where it may have the warmth of the fire, but not too near; when it is dreffed, hoil it in hay and pump-water, until tender: it will keep two or three months, if when mouldy it is dipped in boiling water.

Bcef Hams.

TAKE a fat leg of beef, rub it well with falt-petre and falt prunella beat fine; then take an ounce of bay-falt well dried, an ounce of falt-petre beat fine, a pound of coarfe fugar, and a pound of common falt; rub this pickle well in every day for a month, then roll it in bran or faw-duft, and hang it in wood finoke, or burn horfe-litter under it for ten days or a fortnight; hang it in a dry place near the chimney for a week; it will then keep very well covered over with bran. Any other piece of beef may be done in the fame pickle.

To collar Beef.

TAKE a thin flank of beef, take off the fkin, beat it, and rub it over with a little cochineal, half a pound of brown fugar, one ounce of falt-petre beat fine, and five ounces of common falt; rub it well in, and let it lie ten days, turning it every day; then take it from the pickle, and put it into warm water for four or five hours, dry it well with a cloth, ftrew over it a good deal of fealded parfley chopt, a little thyme, fome green fweet marjorum, and a little fage, feafoned with pepper, falt, and nutmeg; cut the lean piece from the fat, and ftrew over it a few of the herbs, then put on the fat part, and then the reft of the feafoning, roll it tight, bind it with a coarfe tape; boil it until it is tender, and hang it up; the next day fcum the liquor it was boiled in, put in half the quantity of vinegar with black pepper and falt, and keep it in the pickle.

Another.

TAKE the flat ribs of beef, bone it, and beat it until it is quite foft; take half a pound of brown fugar, an ounce of falt-petre beat fine, half an ounce of falt prunella, a quarter of a pound of common falt; rub it well all over the meat, let it lie for twelve or fourteen days (according to the fize); turn it every day, then foak it in warm water nine or ten hours, lay it upon a table, and cut it across each way about the fize of a finger, but do not cut the outfide : fkin the places that are cut. fill one with chopt parfley, another with bread grated fmall, another with fat pork cut fmall, mace, nutmeg, pepper, and falt, until they are full, then roll it up and bind it tight with coarfe broad tape, tie it up close in a cloth, and boil it four or five hours very flowly; when it is done, hang it up by the ftring to keep it in shape; the next day four the liquor, add to it half the quantity of very stale ale, if it is to be had, if not, of very fale finall beer, fome mace, long pepper, and falt: put in the beef and keep it for ufe. Cut a piece off each end when it is fent to table. If it is to be kept, make a fresh pickle every week.

Bæuf à la Vinegrette.

CUT a flice of beef from the round three inches thick, with very little fat: flew it in water and a glafs of white wine, feafoned with falt, pepper, cloves, a bunch of fweet herbs, and a bay-leaf; let it boil till the liquor is almost confumed, and when it is cold ferve it up; ftrain off what liquor remains, and mix it with a little vinegar.

To pot Beef.

TAKE two pounds of lean beef, cut it into flices, and lay them upon a plate, feafon them with falt and falt-petre and a little cochineal; turn and feafon them on the other fide, then let them lie one upon another all night, put them into a pan; add to them half a pint of fmall beer, a little vinegar, as much water as will cover them; let there be in the pickle fome black and Jamaica pepper, cover them very clofe and bake them; when they are baked, take the flices out of the pickle while they are hot, let them lie till cold, then beat them in a mortar, add to them a pound of freth butter while they are beating; alfo fome falt, pepper, and nutmeg; when they are well beat, put them into the pot, and when the bread is drawn, put it into the oven until it is hot through; when it is cold cover it over with clarified butter, and it will keep a month or two.

Another Way.

RUB a leg of mutton piece of beef, or part of it, with a little falt petre, let it lie twenty-four hours; wafh and dry it, cut it into pieces, put it into a pan with a little water at the bottom, fome butter laid in lumps at the top; tie over it a thick piece of paper, bake it till tender; take it out while hot, free from gravy, pick out all the finews and fat, beat it in a mortar, with pepper, falt, and a few pounded cloves; add in the beating the butter which cakes upon the gravy, and what more is neceffary to make it mellow; it muft be beat fine and be well feafoned; put it down in pots, fet it for five minutes into a flack oven, and pour over clarified butter.

To hot cold Bcef.

CUT it fmall, add to it fome melted butter, two anchovies boned and wafhed, a little Jamaica pepper beat fine; put them into a marble mortar, and beat them well together till the meat is yellow; then put it into pots, and cover it with clarified butter.

Ox-Cheek.

DRESS it in the fame manner as the leg of beef; take care so make it very clean.

To pot Ox-Cheek.

TAKE an ox-cheek, if too large half a one, wash it well and bone it, rub it over with the fame ingredients that are used to potted beef, and set it into an oven until it is tender; then take out the fat, the skin, and the palate; add to a pound of the meat two ounces of the fat that swims on the top of the liquor, beat it together in a mortar, and manage it as potted beef.

To boil a Tongue.

IF it is a dried one, fleep it all night in water, boil it three hours; if out of pickle, wash it only; boil it two hours (this for a middling fized tongue), peel it, and run a filver skewer through it.

To hickle a Tongue.

RUB it well with falt, and let it lie four or five hours, pour off the foul brine; take two ounces of falt-petre beat fine, and tub it all over the tongue; then mix a quarter of a pound of bay-falt, a quarter of a pound of brown fugar, and an ounce of falt-prunella (then bay-falt and falt-prunella beat very fine) and tub it well over the tongue; let it lie in this pickle three or four days; make a brine of a gallon of water with common falt, ftrong enough to bear an egg, half a pound of brown fugar, two ounces of falt-petre, and a quarter of a pound of bay-falt; boil it a quarter of an hour, fcum it well; when cold, put in the tongue; let it lie in this pickle a fortnight or three weeks, turning it every day; either boil it out of the pickle, or hang it in wood fmoke to dry.

To roaft a Tongue or Udder.

PARBOIL the tongue and udder, flick in them ten or twelve cloves, roaft them and bafte them with red wine, froth them with a piece of butter. Sauce-gravy and fweet fauce.

The udder eats well boiled with the tongue.

To roast a Tongue, and to stuff the Udder with Forcemeat.

BOIL the tongue and udder until they are tender, peel the tongue, and flick five or ten cloves into it, if agreeable; raife the udder, wash the infide with the yolk of an egg, make a good forcemeat of veal, and fill it; tie the ends close together and roast them; baste them with red wine and butter: an hour will roast them. Sauce—good gravy, and currant jelly.

To stew an Ox Tongue.

PUT it to flew with just water enough to cover it, let it fimmer two hours; peel it, and put it into the liquor again, with fome pepper, falt, mace, cloves, and whole pepper, tied in a bit of fine cloth; a few capers, chopped turnips, and carrots fliced, half a pint of beef gravy, a little white wine, and a bunch of fweet herbs; let it flew very gently until it is tender, then take out the fpice and fweet herbs, and thicken it with a piece of butter rolled in flour.

Ox Tongues fried.

BOIL them till they are tender, cut them into flices, and feafon them with a little nutmeg, cinnamon, and fugar; beat the yolk of an egg well, and with a feather rub it over the flices of tongue, adding a little lemon juice; make fome butter boiling hot in the frying-pan (which it is when it has done hiffing), put in the flices when they are enough. Serve them up with white wine, fugar, and melted butter, well beat in a boat.

To marinate Ox Tongues.

BOIL them till tender, and peel them; when cold put them into a veffel that will hold them at full length; make a pickle of white wine and white wine vinegar (as much as will fill the veffel), fome nutmegs, ginger fliced, mace, whole cloves, a bunch of fweet herbs, confifting of parfley, fweet marjorum, fage, winter favory, thyme, and bay-leaves; boil them well, when cold put them to the tongues, with fome falt and fliced lemon; clofe them up. Serve them in flices in fome of the liquor. They may be larded if agreeable.

To pot Ox Tongue.

DO it as for pickling: when it has lain its time, cut off the root, boil it until it will peel; then feafon it with falt, pepper, cloves, mace, and nutmeg, all beat' fine; rub it well in while it is hot, put it into a pan, pour melted butter over it and fend it to the oven; an hour will bake it; then let it ftand to cool, rub a very little more fpice over it, and lay it into the pot it is to be kept in; when the butter it was baked in is cold, take it from the gravy, clarify, and pour it over the tongue; if there is not enough to cover it, add more. Partridges, pigeons, or any other birds, may be laid on each fide; the butter muft be an inch higher than the tongue.

Ox Palates stewed.

CLEAN four or five palates, put them into an earthen pan with water to cover them; tie them down, bake them (or boil them); when tender, peel them, cut them into pieces, flour them; put them into fome good gravy, with an onion, a little pounded cloves, a piece of lemou-peel, and fome ketchup; flew them half an hour, take out the peel and onion; add fome morels, forcemeat balls, and lemonjuice, and, if to be had, artichoke bottoms boiled and quartered. Garnifh with lemon fliced, or the peel cut like ftraws.

To rouft Ox Palates.

BOIL them till they are tender, blanch them, cut them into flices two or three inches long: take fome pigeons, and fmalf chickens no bigger than pigeons, draw, trufs, and fill them with forcement, let half of them be nearly larded, fpit them on a bird-fpit, as follows: a bird, a palate, a fage-leaf, and a piece of bacon; have ready two fweetbreads cut in pieces, fome artichoke bottoms cut in pieces, and fome oyfters, with fome blanched cock's-combs, all fried; rub the difh (if agreeable) with fome efchalots, lay the chickens, pigeons, and what is roafted in the middle, and lay the other things round them. Make the fauce for them as follows:—A quarter of a pint of red-wine, a pint of gravy, the liquor of the oyfters, an anchovy, a little lemon-juice, and a piece of butter rolled in flour; when it is boiled the thicknefs of cream, pour it over the palates into the difh.

Ox Palates pickled.

WASH the palates clean with falt and water, then put them to boil in fome more falt and water, four them very clean; let them fimmer four or five hours, and feafon them with pepper, cloves, and mace; when they are tender, cut them into pieces and let them cool. Make a pickle of half white wine and half vinegar, boil it, and put in the fpice that was boiled with the palates; add fix or feven bay-leaves and fome frefh fpice; when both are cold, put them together, and keep them for ufe.

To pickle Bcef.

TAKE a piece of beef, flick it all over with garlick and cloves, feafon it well with falt, mace, and allfpice, cover the meat with vinegar, and turn it every day for a fortnight; as the vinegar waftes, add more; then put it in a flew-pot, with fome vinegar and white wine, cover it down very clofe, flew it fix hours, if a large piece; add vinegar and white wine to it as it flews, if neceffary: fome onions flould be flewed to eat with it.

To pickle Beef which will keep Five or Six Months.

A round, or any piece of beef.—Take out the bones, beat fine fome juniper-berries, nutmeg, mace, cloves, pepper, Jamaica pepper, and falt, a few bay-leaves (if agreeable), mix thefe ingredients well together, and flice in fome garlick and efchalot, rub the beef well all over with it in every part; let it lie in this feafoning a week or ten days, in a veffel for that purpofe; then boil fome of the beft white wine vinegar, and when it is cold, put it to the beef, cover it down very clofe; if it is to go abroad, it must be covered with oil, and put into a barrel well hooped, the meat, pickle, and feasoning, directly when the vinegar is poured on it. It may be either roafted or flewed, but flewed is best; flew the meat, and fome onions cut small, a little while, and then add fome white wine, fome good gravy, a piece of butter rolled in flour, ftir it altogether, and thew it till the meat is tender. Some flew the meat and onions in oil before the other ingredients are put in; it is reckoned the best way.

Ox Heart.

MIX bread crumbs, chopt fuet (or a bit of butter), parfley chopt, fweet-marjorum, lemon-peel grated, pepper, falt, and nutineg, with a yolk of egg; fluff the heart, and bake or roaft it with a poor man's jack. Serve it with gravy, a little red wine in it, melted butter, and currant jelly in boats. Some lard it with bacon.

Tripe.

BOIL it with a few finall onions; ferve it in the liquor, melted butter in a boat. Or dip it in batter and fry it.

Tripe à la Fricasce.

LET it be very white, cut it into flips, put it into fome boiled gravy with a little cream, and a bit of butter mixed with flour; flir it till the butter is melted; add a little white wine, lemon-peel grated, chopped parfley, pepper and falt, pickled muthrooms or lemon-juice; fhake all together; ftew it a little.

Ox Feet fried.

BOIL them till tender, fkin and fplit them, take out the bones and fry them in butter; when they have fried a little, put in fome mint and parfley fhred finall, a little falt, fome beaten pepper; beat the yolks of eggs, fome mutton gravy and vinegar, the juice of a lemon or orange, and nutmeg: lay it in the difh, and pour the fauce over it. Some love a little fhred onion in it.

Skirts

EAT well broiled, and they make an excellent pic.

Kidneys

MAKE good gravy.

Directions to choofe Veal.

HE flesh of a bull-calf is firmer than that of a cow, but then it is feldom fo white; the fillet of a cow-calf is generally preferred, on account of the udder; if the head is fresh the eyes are plump, but if stale, they are funk and wrinkled.

If a fhoulder is stale, the vein is not of a bright red; if there are any green or yellow spots in it, it is very bad.

The breaft and neck, to be good, fhould be white and dry; if they are clammy, and look green or yellow at the upper end, they are ftale.

The loin is apt to taint under the kidney; if it is stale, it will be fost and slimy.

A leg fhould be firm and white; if it is limber, and the flefh flabby, with green or yellow fpots, it is not good.

DIFFERENT PIECES OF VEAL.

Fore Quarter.

THE fhoulder, neck, and breaft; the throat fweetbread, and the wind-pipe fweetbread, which is the fineft, and belongs to the breaft.

Hind Quarter.

THE loin, and the leg, which contains the knuckle and fillet.

The Head.

Tongue, WHICH has the heart, liver, lights, nut, melt, kidneys, and fkirt.

The Feet.

Boiled Veal.

VEAL fhould be well boiled; a knuckle of fix pounds will take very near two hours: the neck muft be alfo well boiled, in a good deal of water; if it is boiled in a cloth, it will be whiter; ferve it with tongue, bacon, or pickled pork, greens of any fort, brocoli, and carrots, or onion-fauce, white-fauce, oyfter-fauce, parfley and butter, or white celery-fauce.

To boil a Knuckle or Breast of Veal after the New England Manner.

BOIL it till it is tender, then take fome veal gravy properly feafoned, thicken it with butter rolled in flour, and a couple of eggs; put the veal in the difh, and pour the fauce over it.

Roaft Veal,

WILL take a quarter of an hour to a pound ; paper the fat of the loin and fillet; fluff the fillet and fhoulder with the following ingredients ; a quarter of a pound of fuet chopped fine, parfley and fweet herbs chopped, grated bread and lemon peel, pcpper, falt, nutmeg, and yolk of egg; butter may fupply the want of fuet; roaft the breaft with the caul on till it is almost enough, then take it off; flour it, and bafte it; veal requires to be more done than beef. For sauce—falad, pickles, potatoes, brocoli, cueumbers raw or ftewed, French beans, peafe, cauliflower, celery raw or ftewed.

Breast of Veal stewed White.

CUT a piece off each end; make a force-meat as follows: boil the fweetbread, and cut it very fmall, fome grated bread, a little beef-fuet, two eggs, a little 'eream, fome nutmeg, falt, and pepper; mix it well together, and ftuff the thin part of 'the breaft with fome of it, the reft make up into little balls; fkewer the fkin clofe down, flour and boil it in a cloth in milk and water; make fome gravy of the ends that were cut off, with half a pint of oyflers, the juice of a lemon, and a piece of butter rolled in flour; when the veal is enough put it in the difh; garnith with the balls flewed, and pour the fauce over it.

To clarify Hog's Lard.

CUT the leaf to pieces, put it into a jar, fet it into a pot of boiling water till the fat melts, and pour it clear off.

DIRECTIONS TO CHOOSE PIGS.

THE fow is preferable to the boar, the flefh has a better flavour, and is more tender: if it has no difagreeable fmell, or green fpots at the belly or tail, it is frefh. Shortnecked pigs are beft; but they fhould be dreffed the day they are killed.

A Pig to roaft.

PUT into it chopt fage, a piece of butter as big as a walnut, and a little pepper and falt; few it up, rub it over with a little fweet oil on a feather, fpit it, and flour it very well all over; keep flouring it till the eyes drop out, or the crackling is hard; when the pig is of a nice brown, and the fleam draws to the fire, rub it well with a bit of cold butter in a cloth; cut off the head, fave the gravy which runs from it; cut off the ears and jaw-bones (which are to be laid at the ends and on the fides of the difh); cut the pig down the back quite through, bruife the brains, chop the fage; put thefe to fome rich gravy, and what has been faved in the roafting; pour fome of this into the difh, the reft in a boat: put a pig iron againit the middle of the fire while roafting, or it will be apt to burn. For fauce—good gravy, plain bread fauce, or bread fauce with currants.

To bake a pig.

LAY your pig in a difh, flour it well all over, and rub it over with butter; butter the difh you lay it in, and put it into the oven. When it be enough, draw it out, and rub it over with a butter cloth; then put it into the oven again till it be dry, and then take it out, and lay it in a difh : cut it up, take a little veal gravy, and take off the fat in the difh it was baked in, and there will be fome good gravy at the bottom : put that to it, with a little piece of butter rolled in flour; boil it up, and put it into the difh, with the brains and fage in the belly. Some like a pig to be brought whole to table, in which cafe you are only to put what fauce you like into the difh.

Pig dreffed like House Lamb.

TAKE the fore-quarter of a pig, about fix weeks old; fkin it, and trufs it as a fore-quarter of Lamb; flour it, fprinkle a little falt over it, and fend it to table nicely frothed. With mint-fauce or falad it will eat like lamb. When it comes to table, cut off the fhoulder, and fqueeze a Seville orange over it: half an hour will roaft it.

The hind-quarter is very good roafted in the fame manner.

To barbicue a Pig.

TAKE a pig nine or ten weeks old, scalded, &c. as for oafting; make a stuffing with a few fage-leaves, the liver of the ig, and two anchovies boned, wathed, and cut very finall; put hem into a mortar with fome crumbs of bread, a quarter of a ound of butter, a very little chyan pepper, and half a pint of Madeira wine; beat them to paste, and few it up in the pig: iv it down, at a great distance, to a large brisk fire; finge : well; put into the dripping-pan two bottles of Madeira wine, nd baste it well all the time it is roafting; when it is half bafted, put into the dripping-pan two French rolls; if there is ot wine enough in the dripping-pan, add more: when the ig is near enough, take the rolls and fauce, and put them into a ucepan; add to them one anchovy cut small, a bunch of veet herbs, and the juice of a lemon; take up the pig, put an ople in its mouth, and a roll on/each fide; then strain the fauce ver it.

Some barbicue a pig of fix or feven weeks old, and flick anched almonds all over it, but bafte it with Madeira in the me manner.

To drefs a Pig au Père Douillet.

CUT off the head, and divide it into quarters; lard them ith bacon; feafon them well with mace, cloves, pepper, itmeg, and falt: put a layer of fat bacon at the bottom of a kettle, lay the head in the middle, and the quarters round ; then put in a bay-leaf, an onion fliced, lemon, carrots, parfnips, parfley and cives ; cover it again with bacon, put in a quart of broth, flew it over the fire for an hour, and then take it up; put vour pig into'a flewpan or kettle, pour in a bottle of white wine, cover it close, and let it flew for an hour very foftly; if you would ferve it cold, let it ftand till it be fo; then drain it well and wipe it, that it may look white, and lay it in a difh, with the head in the middle, and the quarters round, and then throw fome green parfley all over. Any one of the quarters is a pretty little dish, laid on water-creffes. If you would have it hot, while your pig is stewing in the wine, take the first gravy it was flewed in, ftrain it, and skim off all the fat; then take a fweetbread cut into five or fix flices, fome truffles, morels, and mufhrooms; ftew all together till they be enough, thicken it with the yolks of two eggs, or a piece of butter rolled in flour, and when your pig be enough take it out, and lay it in your difh. Put the wine it was stewed in to the ragout, then pour all over the pig, and garnish with lemon.

A Pig Matelote.

HAVING gutted and scalded your pig, cut off the head and pettitoes, and cut your pig into four quarters : put them with the head and toes into cold water; cover the bottom of a stewpan with flices of bacon, and place the quarters over them, with the pettitoes, and the head cut in two : feafon the whole, with pepper, falt, thyme, bay-leaf, an onion, and a bottle of white wine : lay more flices of bacon over them, put over it a quart of water, and let it boil: take two large eels fkin and gut them, and cut them in pieces of about five or fix inches in length: when your pig is half done, put in you eels; then boil a dozen of large craw-fish, cut off the claws, and take off the shell of the tails. When your pig and cels b enough, lay first your pig and the pettitoes round it: but do no put in the head, as that will be a pretty difh cold : the lay your eels and craw-fish over them; take the liquor they were stewed in, skim off all the fat, and add half a pint of strong gravy, thickened with a little piece of butter rolled in flour, and a spoonful of browning, and pour over it. Garnish with crawfish and lemon.

A rich Gravy Soup.

CUT feven or eight pounds of lean beef into pieces; put it into a stew-pot with a shank of ham, or a bit of lean bacon, a little bit of butter; lay on the meat two or three carrots fliced, two onions, a turnip, half a dozen cloves, three heads of celery, a bunch of fweet herbs; cover the pot close, fet it over a flow fire, at a distance, that the gravy may draw out gradually, which pour off; then let the meat brown over the fire rather quick, but take care it does not burn, as that will quite fpoil the foup; pour over the meat fix or feven quarts of water; let this fimmer, or boil very gently, till reduced to about feven pints, or as it is liked for richnefs; put to it the gravy which was drawn from the meat; ftrain it; when cold, take off the fat; heat the foup with vermicelli, and the nicest part of a head of celery boiled and cut to pieces, chyan, and a little falt; carrot may be added cut into fmall pieces and boiled, with fpinach and endive; or the herbs without the vermicelli, or vermicelli only; a dried French roll, the crumb first taken out. Make the foup the day before it is wanted.

N.B. All foups and stews are best done in an earthen veffel, made with a close cover; it gives them a rich flavour, and is always used by French cooks.

Cow-heel Soup.

TAKE fix pounds of mutton, five pounds of beef, and four of veal, the coarfest pieces will do; cut them across with a knife; put them into a pot, with an old fowl beat to pieces, and the knuckle part of a ham; let thefe ftew without any liquor over a very flow fire, but take care it does not burn to the pot; when it begins to flick to the bottom, flir it about, and then put in fome good beef broth that has been well fcummed from the fat; then put in fome turnips, carrots, and celery cut fmall, a bunch of fweet herbs, and a bay-leaf; then add fome clear broth, and let it flew about an hour; while this is doing, take a cow-heel, split it, and set it on to boil in some of the fame broth; when it is very tender, take it off, and fet on a ftew-pan with fome crufts of bread, and fome more broth; let them foak for eight or ten minutes: when the foup is flewed enough, lay the crufts in a tureen, the two halves of the cow-heel upon them; and then pour on the foup, which will be very rich and good.

Soup à-la-Reine.

PUT into a flew-pan two pounds of lean veal cut into flices, two or three flices of ham or lean bacon, a carrot, a large onion fliced, four pepper-corns, a dozen coriander-feeds; let thefe draw very gently; add four quarts of beef broth, and let it boil gently one hour; ftrain it, pound the white of a roaft fowl; blanch and beat half a pound of fweet almonds, half a dozen of bitter; bruife four yolks of eggs boiled hard; mix thefe with the foup; rub it through a napkin, heat it, and add a little cream; keep it ftirring, do not let it boil; put into the tureen the crumb of a French roll whole.

Macaroni Soup.

TAKE three quarts of ftrong broth, and one of gravy, and mix them together : take half a pound of fmall pipe-macaroni, and boil it in three quarts of water, with a little butter in it, till it be tender ; then ftrain it through a fieve, cut it in pieces of about two inches in length, put it into your foup, and boil t up for ten minutes. Send it to table in a tureen, with the cruft of a French roll toafted.

Soup Lorraine.

BLANCH a pound of almonds, beat them in a mortar, with very little water to keep them from oiling; put to them all he white part of a large roaft fowl, and the yolks of four oached eggs; pound all together as fine as poffible; take hree quarts of strong veal broth, let it be very white, and cum off all the fat; put it into a stew-pan, with the other ngredients, and mix them well together; boil them foftly over flove, or on a clear fire; mince the white part of another oast fowl very fine; feafon it with pepper, falt, nutmeg, and little beaten mace; put in a bit of butter as big as an egg, nd a fpoonful or two of the foup strained, and fet over the tove to be quite hot; cut two French rolls in thin flices, and et them before the fire to crifp; take one of the hollow rolls which are made for oyfter loaves, and fill it with the mince; ay on the top as close as poffible, and keep it hot; strain the bup through a piece of dimity into a clean faucepan, and let flew till it is the thickness of cream; put the crifped bread n the difh or tureen, pour the foup over it, and place the roll vith the minced meat in the middle.

Soup de Santé.

TAKE a dozen pounds of gravy-beef, put it into a pot, with water enough to cover it, and two quarts over; put in fome pepper, falt, fpices, and a few fweet herbs; boil it very foftly, till the goodness of the meat is all in the broth: this may be fet on and boiled over night; in the morning, fet on a pot with a knuckle of veal, and a fowl, an old cock will do; ftrain the beef from the broth; put to it the veal, and fet it on to ftew; put to it nutmeg fliced, two or three blades of mace: let this fimmer till the meat is boiled down (the liquor will be as ftrong as jelly) then put in a large flice of bacon fluck with cloves; let it boil five minutes after the bacon is in, take it up and ftrain it off, then cut into thin pieces a quarter of a pound of bacon; lay it at the bottom of a ftew-pan, and put to it a piece of butter; over this lay five pounds of veal cut into thin flices, fet this over a clear fire to colour; when it cracks, put in some of the fat from the hot broth, and stir it very little: flice two middling carrots, three turnips, and one onion : throw thefe in, with fome parfley cut fmall, fome thyme-leaves ftript from the stalks, fome whole pepper, and fome fresh mushrooms; fry all thefe well together, and when of a good colour, put it all into the pot of broth; fome of the broth must be left to foften the bread for the foup.

When all this is ready, take fome endive and Dutch lettuce, fome chervil and celery, wash and drain them very well, cut them fmall, put them into a faucepan, and pour fome of the broth upon them; flew them, and then cut off the crufts of two French rolls; boil them up in three pints of broth, and ftrain it through a fieve; put this to the herbs that are flewing; when this has boiled up with the herbs, pour all together into the pot of foup, and let it boil a quarter of an hour; be very careful to fcum off the fat: then lay in the bottom of a tureen fome French bread in flices, or the cruft of rolls dried before the fire, but they must be foaked in a little of the broth first; when these are laid in the tureen, have ready a nice young fowl boiled very white, and lay in the middle upon them ; then pour in the foup: this quantity is for a large family; but if it is made for a small one, it will ferve many times, and be better every time it is warmed up. This is an exceeding rich good foup.

Santé Soup, the English Way.

TAKE ten or twelve pounds of gravy beef, a knuckle et will tafte raw. The liquor of a leg of pork makes good peafe foup in a common way, or any bones boiled.

Savoy Soup.

TAKE five large favoys, cut them in quarters and boil them a little in water; ftrain the water off; when they are cool, iqueeze them dry from the water, then put them into a faucepan, with as much beef gravy as will cover them: fet the fauce-pan on a moderate fire, cover them very clofe, and let them ftew two hours; then fet on a large frying-pan, with a quarter of a pound of butter; fhake in fome flour, and ftir it till it is brown: peel a couple of onions, put them into the butter, and ftir it well about; when thefe are fried brown, pour in a quart of veal gravy, mix them all well together; foak fome crufts of French rolls in the gravy where the favoys are ftewed, and lay them at a little diftance from each other; then pour in the gravy and onions. This is a very rich good foup.

Hop-top Soup.

TAKE a large quantity of hop-tops, in April, when they are in their greateft perfection; tie them in bunches twenty or hirty in a bunch; lay them in fpring-water for an hour or two, Irain them well from the water, and put them to fome thin beafe foup; boil them well, and add three fpoonfuls of the juice of onions, fome pepper and falt; let them boil fome time longer; when done, foak fome crufts of bread in the broth, and lay them. n the tureen, then pour in the foup.

This is a plain foup, but very good; the French pour in ome cray-fifth cullis.

Brown Turnih Soup.

CUT four pounds of gravy-beef in thin flices, put it into a ew-pan, with a little fat bacon; fry it brown, put in two irnips and one fliced carrot; when it is brown, and the gravy ins from it, put into the pan fome good beef broth, cloves, face, pepper, a bunch of fweet herbs, four young onions, and fprig of parfley; let thefe ftew till the gravy is very rich, then rain it through a fieve: have ready a duck half-roafted, put whole into the foup; then cut fome turnips like dice, and y them brown in butter; put them into the foup, let the duck ew in the foup till it is enough; ferve it up with the duck in it middle.

Soup with Sorrel and Eggs.

FISH.

To choose Fish.

THERE is a general rule in choosing most kinds of fish; if their gills are red, their eyes plump, and the whole fish stiff, they are good: if, on the contrary, the gills are pale, the eyes funk, and the fish flabby, they are state.

Directions for boiling Fish.

ALL kinds of fifh fhould be boiled in hard water, as it adds a firmnefs to it, and not put in till the water boils; there fhould be horfe-radifh and fome falt boiled in the water with all fifh, except mackarel; with them fhould be put falt, fennel, parfley, and mint. Care fhould be taken to boil the fifh well, but not to let it break.

General Directions for frying Fish.

AFTER it is well washed, it must be well dried with a cloth; flour it, and then put into the frying-pan as much lard, or beef dripping, as will cover the fish (but lard is best); it must boil before the fish is put in, that is, when it has done hissing; let it fry quick; it should be of a light brown, not too dark a colour; if there is occasion, turn it with the flice; when it is done, take it up, and lay it upon a coarse cloth in a diss to drain; it may be rubbed over with a feather dipped in the yolk of an egg, and then rolled in crumbs of bread and flour mixt, or in a batter mixed up with ale and flour; either way is an addition to the fish.

To dress a Turtle.

WHEN the turtle is killed, cut the back from the belly, and wash it clean from the blood in three or four waters, with fome falt; cut the fins from the back, fcald and fcrape them clean from the scales; put the meat in a faucepan, with a little falt, and rather more water than will cover it ; let it ftew, but fcum it very clean all the time: if the turtle is large, put into it a bottle of white wine'; if fmall, a pint will do; the wine must not be put in till it has stewed an hour and a half,' and the fcum has done rifing; if the wine is put in before, it will make the turtle hard : put into it, while it is stewing, an onion or two fhred fine, with a little thyme, parfley, black pepper, and falt : when it is stewed very tender, take it out of the faucepan, and cut it into small pieces ; wash the back-shell very clean from the blood, then rub it with pepper, falt, thyme, parfley, and onions fired fine, and mixed together; put the meat into the shell, with a layer of feafoning between every layer of meat, till the shell is full; cover it with feafoning: if it is a large turtle, two pounds of butter must be cut into bits, and laid between the feafoning and the meat. The foup must be thickened with butter rolled in flour. A large turtle will take an hour and a half.

Another Way to drefs Turtle.

WHEN the turtle is killed, cut the back from the belly, and wash it clean from the blood in three or four waters with falt; then take from the back-shell all the meat and entrails, except the fat, which must be baked with the shell; cut it into pieces of a moderate fize, taking from it all the bones, and put them, with the fins (which must be fealded and feraped clean) into a pot,"with the head, a gallon of water, falt, and two blades of mace: when it boils, fcum it clean; then put in a bunch of thyme, parfley, fweet herbs, and fome young onions, and the veal part of the turtle (except a pound and a half, which muft be made into forcemeat balls) with a little chyan pepper: when it has boiled in the foup an hour, take it out. The entrails, which are reckoned the beft, must be split open, scraped, and made clean, cut into fmall pieces, and put into the other part. The paunch, or maw, must be scalded, skinned, and cut into pieces, and put to the reft, with the lights, heart, and liver: put it all together into a faucepan, with half a pound of butter, a few efchalots, a bunch of thyme, parfley, and fweet herbs, fome falt, white pepper, mace, beaten cloves, and a little chyan pepper : let it flew half an hour over a good charcoal fire, put in with it as much of the broth as will cover it; fcum it well, and when it is half done, put in a pint-and a half of Madeira wine : it will take four or five hours doing: when it is almost done, foum it, and thicken it with fome flour and veal gravy, the thickness of a fricaffee: make fome forcemeat balls with the veal part, which was left, about the bigness of a walnut; fry them, and put them into the flew : if it has any eggs, let them be cleaned and boiled ; if there are none, boil twelve or fourteen hardeggs; then put the ftew (which is the callepash) into the back-shell, with the eggs and balls over it, and put it into an oven to brown; the liver, lights, and heart should be taken from the callepash : before it is put into the shell, the callepy must be flashed in feveral places, and feafoned with butter, chopt thyme, fweet herbs, parfley, onions, falt, white pepper, and a little chyan: put a piece into each flash, fome over it, and a little flour : bake it in a tin or iron dripping-pan, in an oven; the back-thell must be rubbed over with feafoning made of pepper, falt, beaten mace, fweet herbs, parfley, and onion fhred fine; bake it in a dripping-pan, which must be done before the stew is put in.

The fins, when boiled very tender, must be taken out and put into a stew-pan, with some good pale veal gravy, a very little white wine, thickened with a little of the gravy and flour, and ferved in a dith by themselves.

The lights, heart, and liver, which were flewed with the callepath, must have a little more feationing added to them, and when warmed up, ferved in a dish by themselves. Strain off the foup, and ferve it in a tureen or foup-dish.

TURBOT.

To choofe Turbot.

IF good, they fhould be thick and plump, the belly a yellow white; if they appear blueifh and thin, they are not good. They are in feafon the greatest part of the fummer; and are generally caught in the British and German ocean.

To boil a Turbot.

MAKE a brine with a handful or two of falt, and a gallon or more of water; let the turbot lie in it two hours before it is to be boiled, then fet on a fifh-kettle, with water enough to cover it, and about half a pint of vinegar (or lefs, if the turbot is fmall); put in a piece of horfe-radifh : when the water boils, put in the turbot, the white fide uppermoft, on a fifh-plate : let it be done enough, but not too much, which will be eafily known by the look; a fmall one will take twenty minutes, a large one half an hour; then take it up, and fet it on a fifh-plate to drain before it is laid in the difh. Sauce—lobfter-fauce and white fauce.

Turbot boiled in Gravy.

TAKE a middling-fized turbot, let it be well washed, and wiped very dry; then take a deep stew-pan, put in the fish, with two bay-leaves, a handful of parsley, a large onion stuck with cloves, fome falt and pepper; heat a pint of white wine boiling hot, and pour it upon the turbot, then firain in fome very firong veal gravy, more than will cover it; fet it over a flove till it is near enough, and then remove it on one fide, that the full firength of the ingredients may be infufed into it: when it is quite done, put it on a hot difh, firain the gravy into a faucepan, with fome butter and flour; pour fome over the turbot, the reft in a fauce-boat.

Plaice, dabs, and flounders, may be dreffed the fame way.

To boil a Turbot au Court Bouillon, with Capers.

TAKE a fmall turbot, wash and dry it, then take fome thyme, parfley, fweet herbs, and an onion fliced; put them into a ftew-pan, then lay in the turbot (the ftew-pan should be just big enough to hold the fish) strew over the fish the same herbs that are under it, with fome chives and fweet bafil; then pour in an equal quantity of white wine and white wine vinegar, till the fifh is covered; then ftrew in a little bay-falt, with fome whole pepper; fet the ftew-pan over a gentle ftove, increasing the heat by degrees, till it is enough; then take it off the fire, but do not take the turbot out : fet a fauce-pan on the fire with a pound of butter, two anchovies fplit, boned, and washed, two large fpoonfuls of capers cut fmall, fome chives whole, and a little pepper, falt, fome nutmeg grated, a little flour, a spoonful of vinegar, and a little water; fet the faucepan over the flove, and keep fhaking it round for fome time, and then fet the turbot on to make it hot; put it in a difh, and pour fome of the fauceover it ; lay fome horfe-radifh round it, and put what remains of the fauce in a boat.

Soles, flounders, large plaice, or dabs, are very good done this way.

To fry a Turbot.

IT must be a fmall turbot; cut it acrofs as if it were ribbed; when it is quite dry, flour it, and put it in a large frying-pan, with boiling lard enough to cover it: fry it till it is brown, then drain it; clean the pan, put into it claret or white wine, almost enough to cover it, anchovy, falt, nutmeg, and a little ginger; put in the fish, and let it flew till half the liquor is wasted; then take it out, and put in a piece of butter rolled in flour, and a minced lemon; let them fimmer till of a proper thickness; rub a hot dish with a piece of eschalot; lay the turbot in the dish, and pour the fauce over it.

SALMON.

To choofe Salmon.

SALMON, if new, the flefh is of a fine red, but particularly to at the gills; the fcales thould be very bright, and the fifh very fliff. The Thames falmon is generally effected the beft, though fome prefer that which is caught in the Severn. It is in feafon in the fpring.

To boil Salmon.

IT requires to be well boiled: a piece not very thick will take half an hour: boil horfe-radifh in the water; fried finelts may be laid round it; garnifh with horfe-radifh and fliced lemon.—Anchovy fauce, and plain butter.

To boil Salmon crimp.

WHEN the falmon is fealed and gutted, cut off the head and tail, and cut the body through into flices an inch and a half thick, throw them into a large pan of pump-water : when they are all put in, fprinkle a handful of bay-falt upon the water, flir it about, and then take out the fifh; fet on a large deep flew-pan, boil the head and tail, but do not fplit the head; put in fome falt, but no vinegar : when they have boiled ten minutes, fcum the water very clean, and put in the flices : when they are boiled enough, take them out, lay the head and the tail in the difh, the flices round. This muft be for a large company. The head or tail may be dreffed alone, or with one or two flices; or the flices alone.

It is done in great perfection in the falmon countries; but if the falmon is very fresh, it will be very good in London.

Salmon boiled in Wine.

TAKE fome flices of bacon, fat and lean together, a pound of veal cut thin, and a pound and a half of beef; ftrew over them fome pepper and falt, and put them in a deep ftew pan; then a fine piece of fresh falmon, cut out of the middle; put it into the ftew-pan upon the other ingredients, pour in as much water as juft will cover it, and no more; fet it over a gentle fire till the falmon is almost done, then pour the water entirely away, and put in two quarts of white wine, with an onion cut in pieces, fome thyme and fweet marjorum ftripped from the ftalks; let them ftew gently, and while they are doing, cut a fweetbread into thin flices, then cut the flices acrofs, and ftew them in a faucepan with fome rich veal gravy; when they are enough, add a quarter of a pint of effence of ham.: take up the falmon, lay it in the difh, and pour the fweetbread and its fauce over it.

. To broil Salmon.

TAKE fome flices cut from a fine falmon, wipe them clean and dry; melt fome butter fmooth and fine, with a little flour and bafket falt; put the pieces of falmon into it, and roll them about that the butter may cover them all over; then lay them on a nice clean gridiron, and broil them over a clear but very flow fire: while the falmon is broiling, make fauce with a couple of anchovies wafhed, boned, and cut into fmall pieces, a leek cut into three or four long pieces: fet on a faucepan with fome butter and a little flour, put in the ingredients, with fome capers cut fmall, fome pepper and falt, and a little nutmeg; add to them fome warm water, and two fpoonfuls of vinegar; fhake the faucepan till it boils, and the fauce is done : when the falmon is enough on one fide, turn it on the other till it is quite enough; take the leek out of the fauce, pour it into a difh, and lay the broiled falmon upon it.

Salmon in Cases.

TAKE a piece of falmon, cut it in fmall pieces, feafon them with pepper, falt, and nutmeg; take as many half fheets of paper as pieces of falmon, and put a piece of falmon into each of the half fheets of paper, fold the paper that nothing can run out, pour a little melted butter over the paper, and then firew fome crumbs of bread over the butter; put them in a tin oven before the fire, but take care the papers do not burn: when they are enough, ferve them up as they are, without fauce.

To drefs Salmon à-la-Braize.

MAKE a forcemeat as follows:—Take a large eel, flit it open, and take out the bone, and take the meat quite clean from it; chop it fine, with two anchovies, fome lemon peel cut fine, a little pepper, and grated nutmeg, with fome parfley and thyme cut fine, a yolk of an egg boiled hard; mix them all together, and roll them up in a piece of butter; then take a large piece of fine falmon, or a falmon-trout, put the forcemeat in the belly of the fifth, few it up, and lay it in an oval flew-pan that will juft hold it; then take half a pound of fresh butter, put it into a flewpan; when it is melted, shake in a little flour; flir it till it is a little brown; then put to it a pint of fifth broth, with a pint of

Madeira; feafon it with falt, mace, cloves, and whole pepper tied in a muslin rag; put in an onion and a bunch of fweet herbs; stir it all together, and put it to the fish; cover it down very close, and let it stew: when the fish is almost done, put in fome fresh or pickled mushrooms, truffles, or morels cut in pieces ; let them flew all together till the fifh is quite done ; take the falmon up carefully, lay it in a dith, and pour the fauce over it.

To roll Salmon.

TAKE half a falmon from the bone, take off the head, fcale and wath it; make a feafoning with oysters cut fmall, some parfley cut finall, and fome crumbs of bread, with pepper, falt, nutineg, and mace: roll it up tight, put it in a deep pot, and bake it in a quick oven. Sauce—anchovy or fhrimps; pour it overit.

Baked Salmon.

TAKE a piece of falmon, and cut it in flices an inch thick ; make a forcemeat as follows:-Take fome of the flefh of the falmon, and the fame quantity of the meat of an eel, with a few mushrooms; season it with pepper, salt, nutmeg, and cloves; beat it all together till it is very fine ; boil the crumb of an halfpenny roll in milk, beat with it four eggs till it is thick, let it cool, and mix it all together with four raw eggs: take the fkin from the falmon, and lay the flices in a difh; cover every flice with the forcemeat, pour fome melted butter over them, and add a few crumbs of bread: lay a cruft round the difh, and flick oysters round it; put it into an oven, and when it is of a fine brown, pour over it a little melted butter, with fome red wine boiled in it, and the juice of a lemon.

To dress pickled Salmon.

TAKE a piece of pickled falmon, lay it in pump-water all night, then lay it on a fifti-plate, and put it in a fiew-pan; put to it three spoonfuls of vinegar, a little mace, some whole pepper tied in a bit of muslin, a whole onion, a nutmeg bruised, a pint of white wine, a bunch of fweet herbs, fome parfley, fome lemon-peel, and a quarter of a pound of freth butter rolled in flour; let thefe be covered very clofe, and fimmer over a gentle fire near a quarter of an hour; then take up the falmon, lay it in a difh, keep it hot before the fire; let the fauce boil till it is of a proper thickness; take out the spice, onion, and sweet herbs, and pour it over the fifh.

A jole of falmon does well this way.

To pot Salmon.

TAKE a falmon that is quite frefh, fcale, wafh, and dry it well, flit it up the back, and take out the bone; mix fome grated nutmeg, mace, pepper, and falt, and ftrew over the fifh; let it lie for two or three hours, then lay it into a large pot, and put to it half a pound of butter; put it in an oven, and let it bake an hour: when it is done, lay it on fomething flat, that the oil may run from it; then cut it to the fize of the pots it is to be put in; lay the pieces in layers till the pots are filled, with the fkin uppermoft; put a board over it, lay on a weight to prefs it till cold; then take the board and weight off, and pour over it clarified butter: it may be fent to table in pieces, or cut into flices.

To drefs dried Salmon.

LAY it in foak for two or three hours, then lay it on the gridiron, and shake a little pepper over it.

To collar Salmon:

TAKE a fide of falmon, cut off a handful of the tail, wash your large piece very well, dry it with a clean cloth, wash it over with the yolks of eggs, and then make forcemeat with what vou cut off the tail; but take off the skin, and put to it a handful of parboiled oysters, a tail or two of lobsters, the yolks of three or four eggs boiled hard, fix anchovies, a handful of fweet herbs chopped small, a little falt, cloves, mace, nutmeg, pepper beaten fine, and grated bread : work all these together into a body, with the yolks of eggs, and lay it all over the flefhy part, and a little more pepper and falt over the falmon : then roll it up into a collar, and bind it with broad tape : then boil it in water, falt, and vinegar, but let the liquor boil first : put in vour collars, a bunch of fweet herbs, fliced ginger, and nutmeg; let it boil, but not too fast; it will take near two hours boiling: when it be chough, take it up into your foufing-pan, and when the pickle be cold, put it to your falmon, and let it ftand in it till used, or otherwife vou may pot it : fill it up with clarified butter, as you pot fowls, for that way it will keep longeft.

To pot Chars.

HAVING cleanfed your chars, cut off the fins, tails, and heads; lay them in rows in a long baking-pan, and cover them with butter; when they be enough, take them out with a fork, and lay them on a coarfe cloth to drain: when they are quite cold, feafon them well, and lay them clofe in the pot; then take off the butter they were baked in clear from the gravy of the fifh, and fet it in a difh before the fire: when it be melted pour the clear butter over the char, and let them be covered with the butter.

STURGEON.

To choose Sturgeon.

STURGEON to be good, the fleth fhould be very white, with a few blue veins, the grain even, the fkin tender, good coloured, and foft; all the veins and griftles fhould be blue; fuch as is brown or yellow, the fkin harfh, tough, and dry, is bad: when good, it has a pleafant fmell; when bad, a very difagreeable one; it fhould cut firm without crumbling. They are taken in the Severn and Tyne, fome few in the Thames; but they are generally caught in the northern feas, at the mouth of the Volga. The females are as full of roe as our carp, which is taken out and fpread upon a table, beat flat, and fprinkled with falt; they then dry it in the air and fun, and afterwards in ovens. To be good, it fhould be of a reddifh-brown colour, and very dry; it is eat with oil and vinegar, and it is called Caviare.

To boil Sturgeon.

TAKE a piece of flurgeon, let it be well cleaned, then put it into a veffel with two quarts of water, a pint of vinegar, a flick of horfe-radifh cut into pieces, two or three bay-leaves, fome lemon, fome whole pepper, and a little falt : let the fifh boil foftly in this liquor till it is enough. Sauce—diffolve an anchovy in a very little water and flrain it ; then put in a very large piece of butter (near a pound) roll it in flour, and melt it very fmooth ; then add the body of a crab or lobfter bruifed, two fpoonfuls of ketchup, the fame of white wine, and fome flrimps : boil all together ; fqueeze in fome lemon, and horfe-radifh ; pour fome of the fauce over the flurgeon, the reft in fauce-boats.

To roaft Sturgcon.

TAKE a piece of freth fturgeon, let it weigh about nine or ten pounds, put it in falt and water for eight hours, do not fcale it; fpit it, and bafte it well with butter a quarter of an hour; then ftrew over it fome crumbs of bread, flour, nutmeg, pepper, falt, a little pounded mace, and fweet herbs dried; mix all together,

To souse Sturgeon.

TAKE a flurgeon, draw it, and divide it down the back in equal fides, and then into pieces; put it into a tub with water and falt, wafh and cleanfe it well: bind it up with tape or bafs, and boil it in vinegar, water, and falt; take care not to boil it too tender: when it is enough, lay it to cool; then pack it up clofe with the liquor it was boiled in.

A pickle to keep Sturgeon.

TAKE as much water as will cover it; put in fome bran till it looks white, boil it till it is fmooth, then firain it; fweeten it with fugar: when cold, put in the flurgeon: it will keep half a year.

COD.

To choose Cod.

THE gills fhould be very red: they fhould be very thick at the neck, and the flefh fhould be very white; they fhould be firm, and of a bright clear colour: when they are flabby, they are not good. They are in feafon from Christmas to Lady-day; and are caught in the British feas.

To boil Cod.

SET on a fifh-kettle of a proper fize for the cod; put in a large quantity of water, with a quarter of a pint, or more, of vinegar, a handful of falt, half a flick of horfe-radifh; let thefe boil together, and then put in the fifh: when it is enough (which will be known by feeling the fins, and by the look of the fifh) lay it to drain, put it on a hot fifh-plate, and then in a warm difh, with the liver cut in half and laid on each fide. Sauce—fhrimps, or oyfter-fauce.

Cod's Head and Shoulders.

WASH it, firew falt over it, put vinegar and falt into the water: if the head be large, it will take an hour's boiling. Oyfter-fauce, and white fauce, or what other is agreeable. The fifth may be grilled in the following manner:—Strip off the fkin when boiled, fet it before the fire, fhake flour over it, bafte it; when the froth rifes, firew over it bread crumbs; let it be a nice brown. Garnifh with fried oyfters, the roe, liver, horfe-radifh and lemon.

To fiere Cod.

TAKE fome flices of cod cut as for boiling; feafon them with grated nutmeg, pepper, falt, a bunch of fweet herbs, an onion fluck with cloves; put them into a flewpan, with half a pint of white wine, and a quarter of a pint of water; cover them clofe, and let them fimmer for five or fix minutes; then fqueeze in the juice of a lemon, a few oyfters, and their liquor ftrained, a piece of butter rolled in flour, and a blade or two of mace; cover them clofe, and let them ftew foftly; fhake the pan often, to prevent its burning: when the fifth is enough, take out the onion and fweet herbs, lay the cod in a warm diffi, and pour the fauce over it.

To broil Cod.

CUT a cod in flices two inches thick, dry and flour them well; make a good clear fire; rub the gridiron with a piece of chalk, and fet it high from the fire: turn them often, till they are quite enough, and of a fine brown. They require a great deal of care to prevent them from breaking. Lobfter or thrimp fauce.

To crimp Cod.

TAKE a cod (it fhould be very new) cut it into flices, and throw it into pump-water and falt : fet over a flove a fifhkettle, or flewpan, (according to the quantity of fifh) almoft full of fpring-water, and falt enough to make it tafte brackifh ; make it boil very quick, and then put in fome flices of cod, and keep them boiling ; fcum them very clean : they will take about eight or nine minutes ; then take out the fifh, and lay them on a fifh-plate. Shrimp or oyfter fauce.

To broil crimped Cod.

PUT a gallon of pump-water into a pot, and fet it on the fire, with a handful of falt; boil it up feveral times, and keep it clean fcummed; when it is well cleared from the fcum, take a middling cod, as fresh as possible, throw it into a tub of fresh pump-water; let it lie a few minutes, and then cut it into flices two inches thick, throw these into the boiling brine, and let it boil briskly a few minutes; then take out the flices; take great care not to break them, and lay them on a fieve to drain; when they are well dried, flour them, and lay them at a distance upon a very good fire to broil.—Lobster or fhrimp fauce.

To fricasce Cod.

TAKE a pound of large cod, and the founds (which muft be blanched, and if dried, they muft be boiled till tender) alfo the roe blanched and wafhed clean, and the liver; cut them in round pieces, put them all into a flewpan, the large pieces of cod in the middle, with a bunch of fweet herbs, a quarter of a pint of broth, or boiling water, and balf a pint of red wine, fome beaten mace, an onion, fome grated nutmeg, and fome falt; cover them clofe, and let them flew five or fix minutes, then put in a dozen of oyfters, with their liquor flrained, and a piece of butter rolled in flour; fhake the pan round till they are enough, and the fauce of a good thicknefs : take out the fweet herbs and onion, lay the fifth in a difth, and pour the fauce over it. It may be done white, by putting in white wine inftead of red.

To bake Cod.

DRAW a cod at the gills, wash it well, and dry it, lard it with a fat eel; then take a pint of oysters, fome fweet herbs cut small, fome grated bread, the yolks of two or three eggs, with fome falt, pepper, cloves, and grated nutmeg; mix these ingredients together, stuff the cod at the gills, and lay it in a baking-difh, but put it upon fomething to keep it hollow from the bottom (there are things made on purpose); put into the difh a pint of red wine, and baste the cod well with butter before it is put into the oven: when it is done, pour off the liquor which is under the cod into a faucepan, with fome shrimps or oysters, an anchovy washed and boned, and a piece of butter rolled in flour; let these boil together, ftir it one way till of a proper thickness. The cod lies best in the dish with its tail turned in its mouth.

A fmall falmon or trout is good baked in this manner.

To broil Cod's Sounds.

TAKE out the founds quite whole, and throw them into boiling water a few minutes, then rub them well with falt, to take off the fkin and the black foulnefs; they will look white and delicate: flour them, fprinkle fome pepper and falt on them, and broil them at a good diftance upon a clear brifk fire. Some eat melted butter with them, but anchovy-fauce is preferable.

To fricasee Cod's Sounds white.

CLEAN them in the fame manner as when they are broiled; only put them into a faucepan, with nutmeg and beaten mace, and a very little water; pour to them cream enough for fauce, and a piece of butter rolled in flour; fhake the faucepan round till it is of a proper thicknefs; pour it into a difh, and fend it to table.

To fricasce Cod's Sounds brown.

PARBOIL them a little, rub them with falt, take off the black fkin; let them fimmer till tender, flour, and fry them, or brown them in a Dutch oven; thicken fome good gravy with a bit of butter rolled in flour, a fpoonful of ketchup, and fome pepper, falt, and lemon-juice; tofs up the founds in the fauce.

SKATE.

To choofe Skate.

IF good, they are very white and thick ; if too fresh, they eat tough ; but if stale, they have a very disagreeable smell.

To boil Skate.

BOIL it in falt and water, with a little vinegar.—Anchovy fauce.

To crimp Skate.

CUT it into long flips acrofs, about an inch broad; have ready a gallon of pump-water, wherein a pound of falt has boiled half an hour, and been well fourmed; put in the fkate, let it boil quick about three minutes, then take it up, drain it, and fend it to table. Sauce—butter and anchovy, or butter and muftard.

To fricafee Skate white.

WASH it very clean, and cut the meat from the boncs into pieces; put it into a flewpan; to two pounds of the meat put half a pint of water, a little falt, beaten mace, nutmeg, and a bunch of fweet herbs; when it has boiled three minutes take out the fweet herbs, put in a piece of butter rolled in flour, a little white wine, and a quarter of a pint of cream; fliake the pan one way till it is thick and fmooth.

To fricasce Skate brown.

TAKE the fifh as above, flour it, and fry it of a fine light brown in butter; lay it before the fire to keep hot; pour the butter it was fried in out of the pan, then put in a piece of butter as large as an egg, well mixed with flour; ftir it round till it is quite finooth, then put in a little beaten pepper, mace, an onion, a bunch of fweet herbs, an anchovy, and a quarter of a pint of water; ftir it round till it boils, then pour in a fpocnful of ketchup, a gill of red wine, and a little lemon-juice; ftir it well together, and let it boil; when it is enough, take out the fweet herbs and onion, then put in the fifh to heat, and fend it to table.

HERRINGS.

To choofe Herrings.

HERRINGS to be good, fhould have their gills of a fine red, their eyes full, and the whole fifh ftiff and very bright; if the gills are of a faint colour, the fifh limber and wrinkled, they are bad. They are a falt-water fifh, and are generally caught in the North fea.

The goodness of pickled herrings confists in their being fat, fleshy, and white.

Red Herrings, when good, are large, firm, and dry; the outfide of a fine yellow, with a good roe or melt.

To drefs Herrings.

THE general way of dreffing herrings is to broil or fry them, with melted butter.

To boil Herrings.

THE properest time for boiling herrings, is when they come before and at the beginning of the mackerel feason; they are by many people reckoned better than when full of roe: the flesh is much poorer than at this feason, when their breeding time is over, and they have had time to feed and recover their flesh.

Clean half a dozen herrings, and throw them into a pan of cold water, ftir them about, and change the water once; fet on a flewpan, with water enough to cover them, fome falt, and a little vinegar; when the water boils put in the herrings; when they are enough, lay them on a fifh-plate in a warm difh. Sauce—fennel boiled and chopt fmall, with melted butter.

Another Sauce for Herrings.

BREAK two new-laid eggs, beat up the yolks with fome pepper, falt, and nutmeg, fhake in a little flour; take an anchovy, wath and bone it, and cut it fmall; melt half a pound of butter, with a little vinegar in the water, fhake in a little flour, and mix all well together; let it boil till it is of a proper thicknefs; fqueeze in the juice of a lemon, and add a little muftard.

To bake Herrings.

WASH and clean them, take out the roes, wash them and put them in again; take fome black pepper, a few cloves, and fome falt; mix them together, and rub it all over the fish; lay them strait in a pot, with fome bay-leaves between; cover them over with allegar rape vinegar, or half vinegar and water is as well; cover them over with a white paper, and over that a strait of thick brown paper; bake them in a moderate oven. If they are baked in good allegar they will keep two or three months. Some who bake them in vinegar and water, pour the first liquor from them, put on fome fresh, and fend them to the oven again.

To pickle Herrings.

TAKE off the heads, and take out the roes, wash and wipe them; to a dozen and a half put cloves, mace, and nutmegs pounded, of each a quarter of an ounce; feason high with falt and pepper; put them into an earthen pan, cover them with the best vinegar, bake them. They will keep three months. Do not take off the four when it rifes.

SOLES.

To choofe Soles.

TO be good, they fhould be thick and firm, the belly of a fine cream colour; if they incline to a blue-white, and the body flabby, they are not good. They are taken in the British feas, and the Mediterranean. They are in feason, at Midsummer.

Soles boiled.

THEY should be boiled in falt and water .--- Anchovy fauce.

To boil Soles with white Wine.

TAKE two or three pair of middling foles; when they are fkinned and gutted, wafh them in fpring-water, then put them on a difh, and pour half a pint of white wine over them, turn them two or three times in it, and pour it away; then cut off the heads and tails of the foles, and fet on a ftewpan with a little rich fifh-broth; put in an onion cut to pieces, a bunch of fweet herbs, pepper, falt, and a blade of mace; when this boils, put in the foles, and with them half a lemon cut in flices with the peel on; let them fimmer flowly, then take out the fweet herbs, and put in a pint of ftrong white wine, and a piece of butter rolled in flour; let them all fimmer together till the foles are enough.

While the fifth is doing, put in half a pint of veal gravy, and a quarter of a pint of effence of ham; let it boil a little, take up the foles, and pour this over it.

To boil Soles à-la-Françoise.

TAKE an earthen difh, and put into it a quart of water, with half a pint of vinegar; fkin and clean a pair of foles, put them into the vinegar and water, let them lie two hours, then take them out and dry them with a cloth; then put them into a ftewpan, with a pint of white wine, a quarter of a pint of water, a very little thyme, a little fweet marjorum, winterfavory, and an onion fluck with four cloves: put in the foles, fprinkle a very little bay-falt, and cover them clofe; let them fimmer very gently till they are enough; take them out, lay them in a warm difh before the fire; put into the liquor, after it is ftrained, a piece of butter rolled in flour, let it boil till of a proper thicknefs, lay the foles in a difh, and pour the fauce over them.

A fmall turbot, or any flat fifh, may be dreffed in the fame manner.

To boil Soles the Dutch Way.

TAKE a pair of large foles, fkin, gut, and waft them very clean in fpring water; fet them on in a flewpan with fome water and a little falt; when it boils put in the foles, and let them boil a few minutes; then put on a faucepan with fome parflev cut finall, in a little water; let it ftand till the water is all confumed, then fhake in fome flour, and put in a good piece of butter; fhake them well together till all is well mixed, then lay the foles, when they are drained, upon a difh, and pour the fauce over them.

To fry Soles.

SKIN them, rub them over with yolk of egg, ftrew on them very fine bread crumbs, or flour them; fry them with a brifk fire.—Anchovy fauce.

To drefs fried Soles, or flat Fish, delicately fine and brown.

TAKE the yolks of two eggs, or more, according to the quantity of fifh you have to drefs, let them be beat fine, and then put them in a wide difh; 'then toaft a bit of bread, and grate it very fine through a grater, take your fifh, and dip in the yolk of the eggs; if they be flat fifh, the belly part only will be fufficient to dip; then fprinkle on a little of the grated bread, and put your fifh into the pan; there will be a fine brown cruft, and your fifh free from being greafy.

To stew Soles.

TAKE the fifh from the bone, cut each into eight pieces; put into a flewpan a quart of boiled gravy, a quarter of a pint of Madeira, or white wine, fome white pepper pounded, grated nutmeg, a piece of lemon-peel; flew thefe together for near an hour; add fome cream, a piece of butter mixed with flour; keep the fauce flirring till it boils, put in the fifh, flew it for a quarter of an hour; take out the lemon-peel, fqueeze in fome lemonjuice; the fifh may be flewed whole in the fame fauce; and if more convenient, cut the fifh, as before directed, and make a little gravy with the bones and head.

To drefs Soles in Fricandeau.

WASH, gut, fcrape, dry, and fkin the foles; take off their heads, tails, and fins; lard them with fmall bits of bacon, and flour them,; fet on a ftewpan with fome melted bacon; when it boils put in the foles fingly, and let them be of a fine delicate colour; take them up, cut fome mufhrooms and truffles upon them; put in fome effence of ham, fome veal cullis, and veal gravy, more than fufficient to cover them; lay the larded fide uppermoft, and let them fimmer very flowly over a gentle fire; when they are done, pour the fauce into a difth, fqueeze in the juice of a lemon, lay the foles in the difth, and ferve them up hot.

To fricasee Soles.

FRY them of a nice brown, drain them; make a few balls with a fmall fole boned and chopped, a little grated bread, and lemon-peel, parfley chopped, pepper, falt, nutmeg, yolk of egg, a piece of butter; fry thefe: thicken fome good gravy (and fome red wine, not too much) with a little flour; boil it up; add chyan, ketchup, and lemon-juice; lay in the fifh and balls, fimmer them a few minutes. Garnifh with lemon.

To bake Soles.

WHEN the foles are washed, gutted, and skinned, cut off their heads and tails, flit them along the back, and feason them with falt, pepper, sweet herbs, parsley, and whole chives: rub a dish with butter, and lay in the foles; pour a little melted butter over them, and strew over that some bread grated fine; bake them of a fine brown; and when enough, take off all the fat; pour some anchovy-fauce in a dish, and lay the foles upon it.

WHITING.

To choose Whitings.

THE firmnefs of the body and fins, and the rednefs of the gills, are alfo the rules to be obferved in whitings. They are generally caught on the English coasts, and are in feason in January, February, and March.

To boil Whitings.

BOIL them in the fame manner as cod; haddock, or any other fifh. Sauce—anchovy, or ketchup and butter.

To broil Whitings.

LET the fire be very clear; wash the whitings in falt and water, dry them well in a cloth, flour them, chalk the gridiron, and let it be hot before they are laid on. Sauce—shrimp or oysters.

Make it a rule always to chalk the gridiron before any fifh is laid on to broil.

To fry Whitings.

WASH, gut, and skin them, turn their tails in their mouths, dry them in a cloth, and flour them well all over, fill the fryingpan with lard enough to cover them; when it boils, put them in, and fry them of a fine brown, lay them on a coarfe cloth to drain, then put them on a warm dith. Sauce—thrimp, oyfter, or anchovy. They are a proper garnish for falmon or cod.

HADDOCK.

To choofe Haddocks.

THEY are chosen by the same rules as the cod, and are a very good fifth when in feason, which is in July, August, and September. They also are taken on the English coasts.

Haddocks boiled.

SALT and hang them up two or three hours before they are dreffed, boil them in falt and water.—Anchovy fauce.

Haddocks broiled.

BROIL them as whitings .- Anchovy fauce.

Haddock baked.

DRAW out the infide of the gills, wash it very clean, fill it with bread crumbs, parsley, and fweet herbs chopped, grated lemon-peel, nutmeg, falt, pepper, a bit of butter, and yolk of egg mixed; fkewer the tail in the mouth, rub it with yolk of egg, ftrew on bread crumbs, flick on bits of butter; bake it in a common or Dutch oven; a little water and white wine in the dish; a bit of mace, and lemon-peel.—Oyster fauce, white fish fauce, or anchovy fauce; put to the fauce what gravy is in the dish, first fcumming it.

MACKEREL.

To choofe Mackerel.

THE goodnels of them is known by the fame rules that herrings are chosen; they are taken on the French and English coasts, and are in feason in May and June.

To boil Mackerel.

BOIL them in falt and water : a very little vinegar.—Fennel auce, and coddled goofeberries.

To fry or broil Mackerel. THEY may be fried or broiled, and are exceedingly good either way, ftuffed with bread crumbs, parfley chopped, lemonpeel grated, pepper, falt, and nutmeg, mixed with yolk of egg--Anchovy fauce and fennel fauce.

They are very good fplit open, the heads cut off, peppered, hung up for four or five hours, and then broiled; with fennel and parfley fealded in melted butter for fauce.

To Collar Mackerel.

DO them as cels, only omit the fage; and add fweet herbs, a little lemon-peel, and nutmeg.

To pickle Mackerel.

CUT each into four or five pieces; feafon them very high with pepper, nutmeg, pounded cloves, and falt; make little flits with a penknife, put in the feafoning; fry them in oil a good brown, drain them very dry, put them into vinegar. If they are to be kept any time, pour oil on the top.

To pot Mackerel.

THEY are potted in the fame manner as eels.

To bake Mackerel.

CUT off the heads ; wath and dry them in a cloth, cut them open, rub the bone with a little bay-falt beat fine; take fome mace, black and white pepper, a few cloves, all beat fine; lay them in a long pan, and between every layer of fifh put two or three bay-leaves, cover them with vinegar; tie writing-paper over them firft, and then thick brown paper doubled; they muft be put into a very flow oven, and will take a long while doing; when they are enough uncover them, let them ftand till they are cold, then pour away all the vinegar they were baked in, cover them with fome more vinegar, and put in an onion fluck with cloves; fend them to a very flow oven again, and let them ftand two hours. They will keep a great while. Always take them out with a flice; the hands will fpoil them. The great bones taken out are good boiled.

To souse Mackerel.

LET them be washed and cleaned; take out the roes, boil them in falt and water; when they are enough, take them out, and lay them in a deep dish; pour away half the liquor they were boiled in, and add to the rest of the liquor as much vinegar as will cover them, with two or three bay-leaves. They should lie two or three days before they are eaten.

To dry Mackerel.

THEY muft be very frefh.—Gut and wafh them very clean, cut off their heads, fplit them down the back, and lay them quite flat, hang them up by the tails to drain; this muft be done in a very cool place. Take a pan and firew fome falt at the bottom, iprinkle the fifh well with falt, lay them in the pan, belly to belly, and back to back; let them lie in the falt twelve or fourteen hours, then wafh the falt clean off, and hang them up to drain for half an hour; pepper the infides a little, and lay them to dry on ftones laid aflant towards the fan; never let them be out when the fun is not upon them, nor till the dews are disperfed, for the ftones they are laid upon fhould be warm and dry. They will be pertectly cured in a week's time; hang them up by their tails, putting their infides together, in a dry place, but not in any finoke.

They must be either fried in boiling oil, or broiled before, or on a very clear fire, and basted with oil on a feather. Sauce will not be wanted, for if they are good they will be very moist and mellow; if they should be dry, a little melted butter and parsley, or crimped parsley.

PILCHARDS.

To choose Pilchards.

THE pilchard is a fmall falt-water fifh; it is larger than the anchovy, but a great deal lefs than the herring, and is good dreffed frefh, or lightly falted.

TROUT.

To choose Trout.

IT is a very fine fresh-water fish; all the kinds of this fish are excellent, but the best are the red and yellow trout. The female are reckoned the best, and are known by having a less head and deeper body than the male; their freshness is known by the same methods that have been already mentioned for other fish. They are in high feason the latter end of May.

To boil Trout.

BOIL them in vinegar, water, and falt, a piece of horfe-ra-White fauce, anchovy fauce, plain butter.

To fry Small Trout.

DRY them, rub them with yolk of egg, flour or firew fine crumbs of bread on them, fry them.—Anchovy fauce.

To stew a Trout.

1T fhould be a fmall one; ftuff it with grated bread, a piece of butter, parfley chopped, lemon-peel grated, pepper, falt, nutmeg, favory herbs, yolk of egg, mixed; put it into a flew-pan, with a quart of good boiled gravy, fome Madeira, an onion, a little whole pepper, a few cloves, a piece of lemon-peel; flew it in this gently till enough; add a little flour mixed in fome cream, a little ketchup; boil it up; fqueeze in fome lemon-juice.

To broil Trout.

CLEAN and wash the trout, dry them well in a cloth, tie them round with packthread from top to bottom to keep them entire and in fhape; then melt fome butter, with a good deal of basket-falt; pour it all over the trout till it is. perfectly covered, then put it on a clear fire, at a great distance, that it may do gradually. Sauce—wash and bone an anchovy, cut it very fmall; chop a large spoonful of capers; melt fome butter, with a little flour, pepper, falt, and nutmeg, and half a spoonful of vinegar: when the trout is done, lay it in a warm dish, and pour the fauce over it.

To marinate Trout.

TAKE the trout and fry them in oil fufficient to cover them, put them in when the oil is boiling hot; when they are crifp, lay them to drain till they are cold; then take fome white wine and vinegar, of each an equal quantity; with fome falt, whole pepper, nutmeg, cloves, mace, fliced ginger, favory, fweet marjorum, thyme, rolemary, a bay-leaf, and a couple of onions; let thefe boil together for a quarter of an hour: put the fifth into a ftewpan, pour the marinade to them hot; put in as much oil as white wine and vinegar, which muft be according to the quantity of fifth which is done, as the liquor muft cover them, and they will then keep a month. Serve them with oil and vinegar.

To souse Trout.

TAKE a brace of middling trout, let them be washed and cleaned; then take three pints of white wine vinegar, a quart of water, an onion fluck with cloves, a little lemon-peel, a bunch of fweet herbs, fome pepper, falt, cloves, mace, and a grated nutmeg; let thefe all boil together in a flew-pan large enough to hold the trout : when it has boiled fome time put in the fifh; when they are enough, lay them in a difh till they are cold; pour off the liquor, take out the onion and herbs, and let it fland till it is cold; then take off all the fat clean, pour it over the fifh, and they will be fit to ufe the next day: if they are to be eat hot, fend them to table with fhrimp or lobfter-fauce made of this pickle, with fried fmelts laid round the difh. Salmon, pike, or almoft any kind of fifh, may be done this way: they are good cold.

To collar Trout. TROUT are collared like eels.

PIKE.

To choose Pike.

THEY are chosen by the redness of the gills, the stiffness, and the brightness of the eyes: the best fort are caught in rivers, the worst in ponds.

To boil Pike.

TAKE a large pike, clean it, take out the gills; make a fluffing with fome crumbs of bread grated fine, fome fweet herbs chopped fmall, fome grated lemon-peel, nutmeg, pepper, falt, fome oyfters chopped fmall, a piece of butter: mix up thefe ingredients with the yolks of two eggs; put it into the fifth and few it up; turn the tail into the mouth, and boil it in pump-water, with fome vinegar and falt in it; when it boils put in the fifth; it will take more than half an hour if it is a large one.—Oyfterfauce; pour fome over the fifth, the reft in a boat.

To boil Pike the German Way.

TAKE a pike of a moderate fize, when it is washed and gutted split it down the back close to the bone in two flat pieces; let it over the fire in a stew-pan of water, half boil it; take it out, scale it; put it into the stew-pan, with a very little water, and some muthrooms, truffles, and morels cut small; add a bunch of sweet herbs: let it stew very gently, close covered, over a very flow fire, or the fish will break: when it is almost done, take out the herbs; put in a cupful of capers chopped small, three anchovies split and strend fine, a piece of butter rolled in flour, and a table spoonful of grated cheese; pour in a pint of white wine, and cover the ftew-pan quite clofe: when the ingredients are mixed, and the fifh quite done, lay it in a warm difh, and pour the fauce over it.

To boil Pike à la-Francoisc.

TAKE a large pike, let it be well cleaned, washed, and scaled; cut it into three pieces; boil it in an equal quantity of white wine and water, with a bit of lemon-peel'; when the liquor boils put in the pike, with a handful of falt; when it is enough, lay it on fippets, and stick it with some little bits of fried bread. Sauce —melted butter, with flices of lemon in it, the yolks of two or three eggs, and some grated nutmeg; pour the sauce over the pike, and fend it to table.

Pike au swimmier.

TAKE a large pike, gut, wafh, and dry it; make a forcemeat with fome eel, whiting, anchovy, fuet, pepper, falt, bread crumbs, thyme, parfley, a bit of efchalot mixed up with the yolks of eggs; fill the infide of the fifh with this forcemeat, and few it up; then draw with a packing-needle fome packthread through the eyes of the fifh, through the middle, and through the tail, in the form of an S; wafh it over with the yolk of an egg, and then ftrew it over with crumbs of bread: bake it or roaft it, with a caul over it. Sauce—melted butter and capers.

Pike au Court Bouillon.

WASH and fcale the pike, lay it in a pan, and pour over it fome boiling vinegar and falt; let it lie for an hour, then take it out, and put into it a feafoning of pepper, a little falt, cloves, fweet herbs, an onion, and a bay-leaf, with a piece of butter; wrap it up in a napkin, and put it into a ftewpan, with fome white wine, a little verjuice, a lemon fliced, a-nutmeg, cloves, and a bay-leaf; make this liquor boil very faft, then put in the pike; when it is enough lay it on a warm difh, ftrain the liquor into a faucepan; add to it an anchovy wafhed and boned, a few capers, a little water, and a piece of butter rolled in flour; let thefe fimmer till of a proper thicknefs; then pour them over the fifh.

To bake or roaft Pike.

IF a large one, make a forcemeat with one pound of fmall pike, or any white fifh, a large onion, fome parfley and fweet herbs chopped fmall, grated lemon-peel, the crumb of near a penny loaf grated, falt, pepper, and cloves pounded, half a pound of butter, two yolks of eggs; fill the pike with this; fkewer the tail in the mouth, rub it with yolk of egg; ftrew over it bread crumbs, ftick on bits of butter; put into the difh with it half a pint of port, a blade of mace, a piece of lemon-peel; bake it in a common oven, or it may be done in a Dutch one.—White fifh fauce, or anchovy-fauce; put to the fauce what gravy may be in the difh with the fifh; first take off the far. Half the quantity of fluffing does for a fmall pike; and the fifh may be omitted in it, but it is not fo good.

N. B. It is an excellent way of dreffing pike; do not cut the fifh open, but draw out the infide at the gills; make it very clean.

Some lard a pike, and bafte it while roafting with anchovy and butter.

To broil Pike.

TAKE a middle-fized pike, as frefh as poffible; melt fome butter, with flour, a little pepper and falt; pour it into a foup-difh to cool. When the pike is gutted, fcaled, and wafhed, dry it well; then with a fharp knife fcore it crofs the back and fides: then roll it in the melted butter: fet the gridiron at a great diftance from the fire, which must be very clear; lay the pike upon it, and let it be well done; when it is almost enough, put it near the fire that it may be brown. Sauce—anchovy or fhrimp.

To pot a Pike.

SCALE it, and cut off the head; fplit it, and take out the back-bone; ftrew it over with bay-falt and pepper; cover it, and bake it; then take it out and lay it on a coarfe cloth to drain; when it is cold, lay it in a pot that will just hold it, and cover it with clarified butter.

It must be well drained from the gravy, or it will not keep.

To souse Pike.

WHEN the pike is gutted, washed, and fcaled, lay it into a large ftewpan, with as much water as will cover it, a few bayleaves, fome cloves, and mace; let it flew till a ftraw will runthrough it; then take it up, and put to the liquor fome white wine and white wine vinegar, with an anchovy; let it fimmer till the anchovy is diffolved: when both are cold, put the pike into the pickle, which will jelly, and keep for fome time.

CARP.,

To choole Carp.

THEY fhould, if poffible, be dreffed as foon as they are caught; if they are dead, it is most likely they will be wasted, as they will live a long while out of the water. The best way to judge of them, is by the fame rules by which other fish are chosen.

To boil a Carp.

SCALE and draw it, fave the blood : fet on fome water in a flewpan, with vinegar, falt, and horfe-radifh; when it boils put in the carp; if it is a good fize, it will take near half an hour; let it boil gently for fear it fhould break. Sauce—take the blood, with fome red wine, fome good ftrong gravy, an onion or two fhred, a little whole pepper, a blade of mace, a nutneg quartered; let all thefe flew together: thicken the fauce with fome butter rolled in flour; ferve up the fifh with the fauce poured over it; fqueeze in fome juice of lemon.

To roaft Carp.

WHEN the carp are cleaned, fcaled, &c. fcotch them, and wash them over with the yolks of eggs; then ftrew over them chopped parsley, thyme, pepper, falt, and nutmeg; mix all together; fpit them on a lark-fpit, or put them into a Dutch oven; baste them with red wine mixed with anchovy and butter. Sauce —red wine, gravy, anchovy, and the melts of the carps, all together: the roes must be dipped in yolk of egg, and fried; lay fried fippets under them.

To stew Carp brown.

PUT into a flewpan a quart of good gravy, the blood of the carp (if agreeable), half a pint of fmall beer (but if bitter, only a quarter of a pint) a quarter of a pint of red wine, a large onion, half a dozen cloves, a piece of lemon peel, and horfe-radifh : let them flew gently till reduced to the quantity that is wanted : ftrain the liquor ; add to it ketchup, lemon-juice, fome of the hard roe bruifed, chyan, a little falt, if neceffary : fimmer this, and if not thick enough, mix a little flour finooth in fome gravy, and boil it up in it, flirring it. Let the carp be boiled, and well drained on a cloth ; put it into the fauce ; fimmer it two or three minutes: let the remainder of the roe be mixed with egg, a little grated lemon-peel, and nutmeg, fried in little cakes ; garnifh the dish with these, suppose out with three corners, and fried dry, horse-radish, and fliced lemon.

To dress Carp au Blue.

TAKE a brace of large carp, wash and gut them while they are alive, as foon after they are taken out of the water as poffible : fplit them down the back, and cut them into different pieces as quick as poffible; lay one carp in the difh, the fcaly fide upwards, and cover it all over with falt; then lay the other upon it, and cover that alfo very thick with falt; have ready boiled three pints of white wine vinegar, a large flick of horfe-radifh cut into flices, a great piece of parfley root, fome ginger, a nutmeg fliced, black pepper, and allspice; pour this liquor and ingredients upon it boiling hot (there must be enough to cover it) let it stand four or five hours; then set on a fish-kettle three parts full of water, with a little falt, a large flick of horfe-radifh cut into pieces, fome parfley-root ginger, black pepper, allspice, and vinegar; let this boil for half an hour, and foum it very clean; then put the fifh, vinegar, and all that is in the difh, into the fifh kettle; let it boil fifteen minutes; foum it all the time it is boiling: fend it to table quite hot; the fcales will be blue, and look very pretty. Saucefugar, vinegar, horfe-radifh, and melted butter; or anchovy and melted butter.

To fry Carp.

SCALE and gut a brace of carp, wash them clean, dry them well in a cloth, flour them, and put them into a frying-pan of boiling lard; let them be of a fine light brown; fry the roes, and cut fome thin flices of bread with three corners, fry them : lay the fish on a coarse cloth to drain; then put them into the dish, the roes on each fide, the toasts between,—Anchovy fauce.

To broil Carp.

WHEN they are fcaled and gutted, flit them down the back, rub them with melted butter, pepper, and falt; broil them at a diftance from the fire: before they are quite done, flour the gridiron to make them of a fine brown. For fauce—make a ragout with the foft roes, artichoke bottoms, mufhrooms, onions, and capers; lay them in the difh, and pour the ragout over them.

To boil Carp au Court Bouillon.

TAKE a brace of carp, fcale, draw, and pull out the fins, put them into an earthen pan; fet on a quart of vinegar, put in a tea-fpoonful of bay-falt: when it boils, pour it over the carp, and let them ftand till they are cold; then fet on vinegar enough in a frewpan to boil them in : when it boils, put them in, and boil them gently till they are enough: before they are quite done, put in half a pint of white wine, with three bay-leaves, a fpoonful of white pepper, an onion, and four cloves; let all boil together a little while, and when the carp is thoroughly done, take them up, and lay them on a napkin. Sauce—ftrain off the liquor; add to it an anchovy cleaned and boned, a little ftrong gravy, a few pickled mufhrooms, and a piece of butter rolled in flour: let it boil, and when of a proper thicknefs, pour it into a fauce-boat.

Carp and Tench Stewed white.

TO one quart of boiled gravy, add a quarter of a pint of Madeira, or white wine, a blade or two of mace, fome whole pepper, a bit of lemon-peel, and horfe-radifh, a large onion, and two anchovies; let thefe fimmer very gently an hour or more; ftrain it; put to it fome thick cream, a piece of butter mixed well with a large fpoonful of flour'; ftir this over the fire till the butter is melted, and the fauce boils up, or it will be greafy; fqueeze in the juice of half a lemon; add more wine and fpice, if agreeable; boil the fifh, drain it well, pour the fauce over it. Garnifh with lemon.

Carp and Tench Stewed brown.

CLEAN and dry them; flour and fry them a nice brown, and dry; fimmer for a quarter of an hour three pints of good gravy, a full pint of red wine, a few cloves, a piece of horferadifh, a good onion, a little chyan, fome ketchup; put in the fifth, flew them gently till enough, clofe covered; take them out, ftrain the fauce; add fome of the roe bruifed, and, if not thick enough, a little flour mixed fimooth with a little gravy; boil this up, lay in the fifth, fet it over the fire for a minute or two. Garnith with the roe boiled, or made into cakes as before, Lunon and horfe-radifh.

To bake Carp.

WHEN the carp are fcaled, gutted, and washed, take a deep earthen dish that will hold them, rub it all over with butter; lay in the carp: put in the dish a bunch of fweet herbs, an onion, an anchovy, fome black and white pepper, falt, cloves, mace, with a little white wine: cover it over clofe, and fend them to the oven: if they are large, they will take an hour; if fmall lefs time will do them: when they are done, take them out with eare, put them over fome hot water to keep warm, cover them very clofe; fcum all the fat off the liquor they were baked in, and ftrain it into a faucepan; add to it half a pound of butter rolled in flour.

TENCH.

To choofe Tench.

THEY are a fine fresh-water fish, and should be dreffed alive; the way to judge of their freshness is to examine the gills, which should be red, and hard to open, the eyes bright, the body firm and stiff. The tench is covered with a flimy matter, which, it clear and bright, is a good fign. They are in feasion in July, August, and September.

To boil Tench.

SCALE them while alive, gut them, and wafh their infides with vinegar; put them into a flewpan, when the water boils, with fome falt, a bunch of fweet herbs, lemon-peel, and whole pepper; put in the tench, cover the flewpan clofe, and let them boil quick till they are done: then ftrain off fome of the liquor in a faucepan: and add to it fome walnut-liquor, a little white wine, a little gravy, an anchovy, and fome oyfters, or fhrimps: boil thefe ingredients together; thicken them up with butter rolled in flour, with a little lemon fqueczed in: pour fome over the fifh, the reft in fauce-boats.

To, roaft Tench.

WASH them, and clean them well from their flime; make a little hole as near the gills as poffible; take out the guts, and clean the throat; make a ftuffing with fweet herbs, a little parfley, a few crumbs of bread, a little grated lemon-peel, and nutmeg, with a little bit of butter, mixed all together, and tuff the fifth with them: tie the fifth to the fpit, with two or hree fplinters, and roaft them; mix butter and vinegar, and pafte them with it.—Anchovy, fhrimp, or oyfter fauce.

To fry Tench.

TAKE a brace of tench, gut, wash, and dry them well in a cloth: then flit them down the back, fprinkle a little falt over them, and dredge them with flour; fry them of a fine brown in boiling lard. Sauce—anchovy, with mufhrooms, truffles, and capers, all chopped fmall, and flewed in gravy, with the juice of a lemon, and a little fifh cullis.

To soufe Tench.

DRAW the tench at the gills, and cut them off, and they will boil the whiter: put into the water fome vinegar, falt, bay-leaves, a bunch of fweet herbs, whole cloves, mace; wipe off the flime, but do not fcale them: when they are boiled, wafh off the loofe fcales: ftrain the liquor through a jelly-bag, and put fome ifinglafs into it that has been foaked, and boil it: lay the fifh into the difh, ftrain the liquor through the bag into the difh over the fifh: let it ftand till it is cold, before it is ufed.

This jelly will ferve to jelly lobsters, prawns, or cray-fish, hanging them in a glass by a thread at their full length: fill the glass with the jelly while it is warm; when cold, turn it out of the glass.

PERCH.

To choofe Perch.

THEY are not fo much effeemed as carp and tench, though a very good fresh-water fish; they are judged to be new by the livelines of their eyes, and the stiffness of their fins. They are in feason from Michaelmas to March.

To fry Perch.

SCALE, gut, and wafh them very clean; fcore them at fome diftance on the fides, but not very deep; dry them well, and flour them all over; fry them in oiled butter: when they are of a fine brown, lay fome crifped parfley round the fifh. Sauce —plain butter.——Some make the following fauce: two ounces of browned butter: put to it fome flour, a few chives chopped fmall, fome parfley, a few frefh mufhrooms cut finall, and a little boiling water; lay the perch in this liquor, after they are fried, and let them flew gently for four or five minutes: then lay them in a warm difh; add two large fpoonfuls of capers cut fmall, thicken it up with butter and flour, and pour it over them.

To broil Perch.

THEY must be very fresh.—Scale, gut, and wash them; then dry them very well in a napkin : melt fome butter, enough to dip the perch in all over; roll them about till the butter flicks well to every part of them : fet the gridiron over a clear brifk fire, but at a great height above it (the perch must be well done before they are browned); when they are near enough, put the gridiron nearer the fire, to brown them. For fauce iet on a faucepan with fome butter, a little flour, a bit of leek, two spoonfuls of vinegar, a little water, fome pepper, falt, a little grated nutmeg, and two or three anchovies washed and boned : keep the ingredients flaking round in a faucepan while the fish are doing : when they are done, take out the leek, and pour the fauce over the fish.

LOBSTERS.

To choose Lobsters.

THEIR tails, if fresh, should be stiff, and pull up with a spring; if stale, the tail will be stabby. This direction is for boiled lobsters. It is better to buy them alive, and boil them; but then they will fometimes live till they are quite spent; if they have not been long taken, the claws will have a quick strong motion upon squeezing the eyes. The heaviest are esteemed the best. The cock-lobster it known by the narrow back-part of his tail; the two uppermost fins within his tail are stiff and hard, but those of the lien are soft, and the tail broader. The male, though generally smaller than the semale, has the highest stable stable is redder.

It is an elegant difh.

A Pulton of Pigcons.

TAKE fome fquab pigeons; when they are picked and drawn, make a large quantity of good forcemeat, roll a piece out flat, and lay it in the bottom of a difh, but firft butter the difh well; cut thin flices of bacon, and lay over the forcemeat; then put in the pigeons, let them lie clofe, but not one upon the other: upon he pigeons, and between them, lay cocks-combs, palates boiled ender, a fweetbread parboiled and cut into pieces, and over thefe lay fome tops of afparagus cut finall, fome mufhrooms, and lome yolks of eggs boiled hard; when the difh is full, roll out unother piece of forcemeat, and cover it entirely; bake it; when t is done, turn it into another difh, and pour round it fome very ich gravy.

A Fricasee of Pigeons.

CUT the pigeons into four, put them into a flewpan, with a pint of red wine, and a pint of water, according to the number of pigeons; this will be enough for fix or eight, but first feason hem with falt and pepper; put into a flewpan the wine and vater, a blade of mace, an onion, a bundle of fweet herbs, and a iece of butter rolled in flour; cover them clofe, and let them ew very flowly till they are tender; then take out the pigeons, ut them over a chaffing-difh to keep hot, take likewife out the nace, onion, and fweet herbs; have ready the yolks of two or urce eggs, beat very fmooth, with fome nutmeg grated; put hem into the fauce, keep them flirring till it is thick, but do not at them boil or fimmer, for fear of curdling; when the fauce is ne and thick, pour it over the pigeons; have ready fome flices f bacon toasted, and fried oysters, ftrew the oysters over the geons, and lay the bacon round.

To jug Pigeons.

WHEN the pigeons are picked and drawn, let a little water ift run through them; parboil the livers, and bruife them with he back of a fpoon; mix with them fome pepper, falt, grated utmeg, lemon-peel, and parfley thred very fine; mix with them much fuet as liver, cut very finall, and the yolks of two eggs biled hard and cut very fine; mix thefe together with raw eggs, nd ftuff the pigeons, tie up the necks and vents; dip the pigeons water, then feafon them with pepper and falt; lay them in the g, with two or three pieces of celery; ftop them very clofe, at no fteam may come out; fet them in a kettle of cold water, lay a tile on the top of the jug, let it boil three hours; take them out, put them into a difh; take out the celery, and put in a piece of butter rolled in flour, fhake it round till thick, and pour it over the pigeons.

Pigcons in Jelly.

THEY are done in the fame manner as chickens.

Potted Pigeons.

SEASON them very high with pepper and falt, put them into a pot with butter in lumps, bake them; pour off the fat and gravy; when it is cold take the butter from the top, put more to it; clarify it, pour it over the pigeons put fingly into a pot, with a little more feafoning added to them.

Another Way.

BONE the pigeons, turn them infide out, rub them with a little falt petre; let them lie four days; feafon them very high with pepper and falt, a little pounded mace; turn them again, put them clofe into the pot, leaving the vacancy in the middle of the pot; bake them; pour off all the gravy, prefs the pigeons tight together, pour over clarified butter; let them fland in a cool place three or four days before they are wanted. Do feveral in a pot. Any kind of poultry may be done in the fame way.

To pickle Pigeons.

BONE the pigeons, take the meat of fome of them, and fkin it, beat it in a mortar, and add to it a little beaten mace, fome pepper, falt, thyme, and parfley cut fmall, fome long flips of fat bacon; roll all these together, stuff fome of the pigeons which are boned with it ; then take fome of the livers, bruile them with a fpoon, and feafon them with the fame fort of feafoning that was used before with the meat, adding a little more thyme cut fmall; ftuff fomé of the pigeons with this, and the remainder with pepper, falt, and parfley cut imall, or oysters, but they must be parboiled first; put on the fire in a faucepan liquor enough to cover the pigeons, made of white wine and water, an equal quantity, and one quarter of vinegar, with fome whole pepper, mace, falt, and a little nutmeg; when these boil put in the pigeons, let them boil half an hour ; then take them out, and let them lie till they are cold: if the liquor they were boiled in is not feasoned high enough, add to it fome more beaten pepper and vinegar; when it is cold put the vinegar into it; let them lie two or three days, and they will be fit for ufe.

QUAILS.

To choofe Quails.

THE best come from France and Germany, where they are fatted, and the fattest are reckoned the best.

To roaf Quails.

TRUSS the quails, and make a fluffing for them with beeffuet and fweet herbs chopped very finall, teafoned with a little fpice; put them upon a finall fpit; when they grow warm bafte them with water and falt, then diedge them and bafte them with butter. For fauce—diffolve an anchovy in good gravy, with two or three efchalots cut very fine, and the juice of a Sevilleorange; lay fome fried bread-crumbs round the difh.

Another Way.

HAVE ready a very clear fire; put round each quail a flice of bacon, and over that a vine-leaf; fpit them, and lay them down at a moderate diftance from the fire; for if they are too near, it fpoils them; and if they are kept too far off, they never have their right flavour. Sauce—the fame as abovementioned.

' To roaft Fieldfarcs.

WHEN they are picked and drawn, lard them with bacon, put a paper round them, and lay them at a diffance from the fire; when they are near done, take off the paper, and let them be of 1 fine brown. Sauce—gravy or melted butter.

PLOVERS.

To choofe Plovers.

WHEN new, they are limber-footed; when fat, they feel nard at the vent; when lean, they feel thin in the vent: when hale, they are dry-footed. Thefe birds will keep a long time weet.—There are three forts of plovers, the grey, green, and paftard plover, or lapwing.

To boil Plovers.

BOIL them in good celery-fauce, white or brown : or they nay be roafted as any other fowl, with good gravy in the difli.

The general Way of Dreffing Plovers is as follows :

GREEN plovers roaft like a woodcock, without drawing; and the trail to run upon a toaft;—with good gravy for fauce.

Grey plovers fhould be ftewed.—Make a forcemeat with the yolks of two hard eggs bruifed, fome marrow cut fine, artichokebottoms cut fmall, and fweet herbs feafoned with pepper, falt, and nutmeg: ftuff the birds, and put them into a faucepan with fome good gravy (juft enough to cover them), a glafs of white wine, and a blade of mace; cover them clofe, and let them ftew very foftly till they are tender; then take up the plovers, lay them in a difh, keep them hot; put a piece of butter rolled in flour to thicken the fauce; let it boil till fmooth; fqueeze into it a little lemon; fcum it clean, and pour it over them.

To drefs Ruffs and Reifs.

THEY come from Lincolnfhire. They may be fatted like chickens, with bread, milk, and fugar: they feed very faft, and will die with fat if not killed in time. Draw and trufs them crofs-legged like fnipes: roaft them. For fauce—good gravy thickened with butter, and a toaft under them.

To stew Larks, or any other small Birds.

TAKE fome larks : when they are drawn, put them into a flewpan to fome melted butter or bacon, an onion fluck with cloves, fome mufhrooms, and fome livers of fowls; tofs them all together, with a little flour; moiften them with fome gravy; and when a little wafted, beat an egg in a little cream or milk, with fome parfley cut finall amongft it; pour it into a flewpan; ftir it round, but do not let it boil; fqueeze a lemon into it.

To roaft Larks.

LET them be put upon a fmall bird-fpit: they will take fifteen minutes: fry fome crumbs of bread; and firew all over them. For fauce—plain butter in a boat.

Larks à-la-Françoise.

TRUSS them with the legs acrofs, and put a fage-leaf over the breafts; put them upon a long thin fkewer; between every lark put a piece of thin bacon; then tie the fkewer to a fpit, and roaft them at a brifk clear fire: bafte them with butter, and ftrew over them fome crumbs of bread mixed with flour: fry fome bread crumbs of a fine brown in butter; lay the larks round the difh, the bread crumbs in the middle.

Larks barded.

WHEN the larks are truffed, cut fome pieces of bacon larger every way than a lark; fpit them on a fkewer (as before directed) with one of thefe bards between every one of them: when' they are near done, throw over them fome breadcrumbs and a little falt. For fauce—bread-fauce and plain butter.

A Ragout of Larks.

FRY them, with an onion fluck with cloves, a few truffles, and mulhrooms; pour off the fat; fliake over the larks, &c. a little flour; put to them fome good gravy; flew them till enough; if there is any fat, fcum it off; add chopped parfley, lemon-juice, pepper, and falt, if neceffary.

Larks aux Poires.

PICK the larks, and trufs them as clofe as poffible; cut off one leg; feafon them with pepper and falt: make a forcemeat as follows:—Take a veal fweetbread, as much fuet, fome mufhrooms, and fome morels, a little lemon-peel, and fome fweet herbs; chop them very fine, mix them with the yolk of an egg; wrap every lark in fome of this forcemeat, and fhape it like a pear, leaving the leg for the ftalk; wafh them over with the yolk of an egg, and ftrew over them crumbs of bread; bake them in a gentle oven of a fine brown, and ferve them without fauce.

Larks in Jelly.

PUT feveral into the jelly in what manner is agreeable, taking care they lie feparate. Any finall birds may be done this way.

To roast Ortolans.

LET them be picked and finged, but not drawn; put them upon fkewers, with bacon round them; tie them to the fpit; when they are enough, ftrew over them grated bread.

Another Way.

SOME fpit them fide-ways, with a bay-leaf between, and lay fried crumbs of bread round the difh.

To pot Moor-game.

SEASON them with pepper, falt, and pounded cloves, rubbing it thoroughly in the infide; roaft them quite enough; when cold put them into potting-pots, ftrewing over more feafoning; pour on clarified butter; leave the heads out.

EGGS.

Directions to choose Eggs.

DUT the great end of the egg to the tongue; if it is warm, it is new; if cold, it is stale. If eggs are put into a pan of cold water when new, they will fall to the bottom; if stale or addled, they will fwim at the top.

. To drefs Eggs, &c.

IN a common way, boil them.—Or poach them, and ferve them on a buttered toaft, or on flewed fpinach or forrel.

Or, with Sausages.

FRY fome faufages, and after them a flice of bread; lay the faufages on it, with a poached egg between each link: if the toaft is too ftrong fried, butter it a little.

Or, with Artichoke Bottoms.

BOIL the bottoms; lay a hard yolk of egg in each bottom; melted butter poured over.

To broil Eggs.

CUT a toast round a quartern loaf, brown it, lay it on your dish, butter it, and very carefully break fix or eight eggs on the toast. Hold a red hot shovel over them, and when they be done, squeeze a Seville orange over them; grate a little nutmeg over them, and ferve it up for a side-plate.

Buttered Eggs.

TAKE yolks and whites, fet them over the fire with a bit of butter, a little pepper and falt; ftir them a minute or two; when they grow thickifh, and a little turned in fmall lumps, pour them on a buttered toaft.

A Fricasee of Eggs.

BOIL them pretty hard, flice them; take a little veal gravy, a little cream and flour, a bit of butter, nutmeg, falt, pepper, chopped parfley, and a few pickled mufhrooms; boil this up: pour it over the eggs; a hard yolk laid in the middle of the difh; toafted fippets.

A Ragout of Eggs.

BOIL ten or twelve eggs hard; put them into cold water, let them lie a little, they peel the better; fhell them carefully, cut the whites lengthways with a fmall knife, fo that they may be neatly halved, the yolks left whole; cut a few truffles and morels in pieces, boil them in a few fpoonfuls of water; take a little of this liquor, fome gravy, chopped parfley, pepper, falt, and nutmeg, a little ketchup, a few fmall pickled mufhrooms; thicken the fauce with a little flour, boil it up with the chopped truffles and morels; fill the whites of the eggs with crumbs of bread crifped, heap them high; lay the yolks between, pour over the fauce. If there is no gravy, they will do without.

Eggs fried.

BOIL fome eggs hard, flice them, fry them quick in butter; take them out with a flice, lay them before the fire; pour the fat out of the pan, fhake in fome flour, young onions, or efchalot chopped, a little beef broth, pepper, falt, grated nutmeg, and a little lemon-peel; boil this up; if not thick enough, ftir in a bit of butter mixed with flour; pour the fauce over the eggs.

SQUEEZE the juice of a couple of large Seville oranges, ftrain it through a fieve, and mix it with as much water, and a fpoonful of white wine; break eight eggs, beat up the yolks and whites together, with a little bafket-falt, and ftir in by degrees the juice and water; fet on a ftewpan with fome rich mutton gravy, pour in the eggs, and keep ftirring it well together, that it may not thicken at the bottom or fides of the pan: when they are done, put them into a fmall difh.

To pickle Eggs.

BOIL the eggs very hard; peel them, and put them into cold water, fhifting them till they are cold. Make a pickle of white wine vinegar, a blade of mace, a bunch of fweet herbs, and a little whole pepper; take the eggs out of the water, and put them immediately into the pickle, which muft be hot; flir them a good while, that they may look all alike; untie the herbs and fpread them over the top of the pot, but cover them with nothing elfe till they are turned brown: they will be fit to eat in nine or ten days.

Bruife fome cochineal; tie it up in a rag; dip it in the vinegar, and fqueeze it gently over the eggs, and then let the rag lie in the pickle. This is a great addition.

RABBITS.

To choose Rabbits.

THE rules are the fame for choosing Rabbits as for Hares.

To boil Rabbits.

BEFORE they are boiled, hold the heads for a few minutes n a faucepan of water that is boiling, which will prevent he difagreeable appearance they otherwife have on cutting up; then boil them half an hour or thereabouts, according to heir fize.

Sauce for a boiled Rabbit.

PEEL any quantity of onions, and boil them in a great deal of water : fhift your water, let them boil about two hours, and hen take them up, and throw them into a cullender to drain. With a knife chop them on a board, and rub them through a ullender; put them into a faucepan, just fhake a little flour over them, put in a little milk or cream, with a good piece of putter, and a little falt; fet them over the fire, and when the utter is melted they will be enough; then pour them over the abbits.

To roaft Rabbits.

THEY will take twenty minutes or half an hour, according o the fize; hold the heads for a few minutes in boiling water plore they are laid down. For fauce—parfley and butter, with the liver parboiled and fhred: but they are beft fluffed with hopped fuet, the liver parboiled and bruifed, bread crumbs, grated rend, and a little lemon-peel, chopped parfley and fweet herbs, olk of cgg mixed, pepper, falt, and nutmeg; gravy in the difh.

To roaft a Rabbit Hare-fashion.

LARD a rabbit with bacon, and roaft it as you do a hare, with a fluffing in the belly: make gravy-fauce; but if you do not lard it, have white fauce made thus: take a little veal broth, boil it up with a little flour and butter to thicken it, and add a gill of cream: keep it flirring one way till it be fmooth, and then put it into a boat, or into the difh.

Rabbits collared, with Aspic Sauce.

BONE two or four fmall rabbits, leaving the heads entire; make a forcemeat with bits of the rabbits that come from the bones, &c. a little eschalot, a bit of butter, a little scraped bacon, pepper, falt, parfley chopped, grated lemon-peel, the crumb of a French roll, a little cream, yolks of eggs, nutmeg; lay this over the rabbits, roll them up to the head, fkewer them, take care to keep in the forcemeat at the ends; lay a flice or two of beef at the bottom of a veffel of a proper fize; put in the rabbits, lay over them fome thin flices of bacon, not too fat, a bit of veal, the rabbit bones, an onion fluck with cloves, a carrot, a flice of lemon, a bunch of fweet herbs, fome whole pepper, a glafs of Madeira, fome warm water; ftew them gently in this an hour and a half; take them up, strain and four the fauce; take a sufficient quantity of it, and if there is any cullis add a ladlefull ; eschalot, tarragon, pimpernel, a very little thyme and marjorum, a little parfley, a few freth or pickled mushrooms, all chopped, the herbs fine; falt, chyan: wipe the rabbits clean; pour the fauce over them, with what orange or lemon-juice is agreeable.

[Rabbits fricased white. See Chicken, omitting the pickled mushrooms.]

[Rabbits fricased brown. See Chicken.]

Rabbits pulled.

HALF-boil them, with an onion, a little whole pepper, a bunch of fweet herbs, a piece of lemon-peel; pull the flefh into flakes; put to it a little of the liquor, a piece of butter mixed with flour; pepper, falt, nutmeg, chopped partley, the liver boiled and bruifed; boil this up, flaking it round.

Portuguese Rabbits.

TAKE a couple of rabbits, cut off their heads, turn the backs upwards, the two legs ftripped to the end, and trussed with two fkewers like chickens, the wings turned like the pinions of a thicken; lard and roaft them with good gravy: if they are boiled, they thould not be larded, but fent to table with bacon or greens, or celery fauce.

Rabbits in Casserole.

TAKE a couple of rabbits, divide them into quarters, flour them if they are not larded, and fry them in butter; then put them into a flewpan, with fome good gravy, a glafs of white wine; feafon them with pepper and falt, a bunch of fweet herbs; cover them down clofe, and let them flew till tender, then take up the rabbits; flrain off the fauce, thicken it with butter and flour, and pour it over them.

Rabbits Surprize.

TAKE two young rabbits and roaft them, cut their heads off very close to the shoulders; take off all the meat from the back, cut it into fmall pieces; take fome milk thickened with a piece of butter rolled in flour, a little nutmeg, and fome falt; put in the rabbits, and let them flew fix or eight minutes, till the fauce is as thick as cream; make a forcemeat with a pound of veal, as nuch fuet, an equal quantity of bread-crumbs, two anchovies, ome grated lemon-peel, a little thyme, and a grated nutmeg; let he veal and fuet be first chopped, and then beat in a mortar, then et it all be mixed together, with the yolks of two eggs; place it ound the rabbits, leaving each fide of the back-bone open, to put he meat in which was cut off; lay in the meat, and fmooth it over with a raw egg; make it fquare at both ends, and butter a lith or a mazarine, and put them upon it carefully; bake them hree hours, let them be of a fine brown; put them into a difti, nd pour over them gravy thickened with butter; fqueeze in the nice of a lemon.

OLIOS.

OLIOS were an invention of the Spaniards, and their receipts for them are far better than those of the French : and his which follows is the best of them.

Spanish Olio.

TAKE fome griftles from a breaft of veal, from a brifket of eef, and from a breaft of mutton; fome sheep's rumps cut in icces; they must all be about the bigness of a singer; take also ve pounds of beef steaks, and put them into a stewing-pot, with a quantity of ftrong beef broth, a bunch of leeks, a large bunch of celery picked very clean: they must flew till the rumps and griffles are tender; then put in two pigeons, a brace of partridges, two pair of hog's feet and ears, the knuckle end of a ham, half of a fine white cabbage, fome pepper, falt, a bunch of fweet bafil, a couple of onions, and fome cloves; cover thefe over with fome beef fleaks cut thick, and over them fome yeal cut into fleaks; pour a little fresh broth upon them, and leave them to slew over a gentle fire : let the whole flew till the liquor is evaporated, and the ingredients begin to flick at the bottom, then put in fome more broth : while these are stewing, set on some large pease, that have been foaking for four-and-twenty hours in water; fet thefe on to boil in fome gravy. The Spaniards use a particular fort of peafe, called Garavances; they are large, and not unlike our grey-pease; but if these are not to be had, any large pease will do : thefe must be boiled very tender, and be ready when the olio is. As the broth boils away, put in fome more, which must boil a quarter of an hour; season the olio to the palate with pepper and falt; have ready a large foup-difh, take out the ingredients one by one, lay them in the difh; the griftles and the roots must be dispersed in different parts among the other things ; then pour over them the peafe and their gravy, and then put in a proper quantity of the gravy. It is not to be eat as a foup, but as olio; the ingredients to be eaten in preference to the liquor. Those that like the soup may have it in a bason, with toasted bread.

A French Olio.

TAKE five pounds of fleaks, cut very thick, from the leg of mutton piece of beef, put them into a deep flewpan; add to them five pounds of veal (any part will do) and a leg of mutton of fix or feven pounds; it muft be fkinned, and the fat taken off; cover it down very clofe, and fet it over a flove with a moderate fire, let it fland till the gravy begins to run; flir up the fire. and let it fland till the meat begins to flick to the pan, but not longer, as it muft not be too brown: pour a little beef gravy into it, and flir it about; when it is all well mixed, put it into a pot, fet it upon the fire, covered very clofe, but put in as much gravy as will fill the pot; then take a dozen carrots, nine parfnips, eight onions, and half a dozen turnips; put thefe into the pot, with a bunch of leeks, a bundle of celery, and a handful of mignonette; let thefe boil well together, and then put in a fowl, a turkey, and a brace of pigeous; add two pounds of ham cut in thack flices; keep it boiling, and as the four rifes, take it off very clean: while there are doing, take four French rolls rafped, our off the crufts, and put them into a flewpan, with a little of he olio liquor; when they are foft, put them into a tureen, or a ery deep foup difh; pour in the broth; let there be fome celery nd fome of the other roots put in, with fome of the beft pieces i the meat, and the pigeons put in whole. This is the plain rench olio; but they often put in partridges to frew in the gravy, nd fometimes they half-roaft them, before they put them in.

To make a Pepper-pot.

TO three quarts of water put a finall cabbage, two large handfuls of fpinach, a head of lettuce, two or three onions, nd a little thyme; cut them very finall, and let them flew with wo pounds of mutton, till they are quite tender; boil with them ome little dumplings made of flour and water, and a piece of ork a little falted: half an hour before it is taken up, put in a obfter or crab, picked very finall, and clean from the thell, with little falt and chyan pepper.

GAME.

VENISON.

HOOSE venifon by the fat: if the fat is clear, bright, and thick, the clefts clofe and fmooth, it is young; but a very ide tough cleft, fhews it is old.

If venifon has been kept fome time, it will first change at the unches and shoulders: run in a knife, and as the smell is sweet rank, it is new or stale; if tainted, it will look greenish, or inming to be very black.

The Fore Quarter

CONTAINS the neck, breaft, and shoulder.

The Hind Quarter

CONTAINS the haunch, which is the leg and part of the n cut together.

The Entrails

ARE called the umbles, which are generally made into a pic.

To keep Venifon fweet; or to improve it when near changing.

IF the venifon is very fweet, only wipe it very well with a cloth, and hang it in a thorough air; if it is to be kept any time, dry it well with cloths, and rub it all over with ginger beat to a powder, and hang it likewise in a very airy place. If it is mufty or changed, wafh it clean with warm water, and then with warm milk and water; it muft then be dried very well with cloths, and rubbed with ginger, and wipe it very clean before it is dreffed.

To boil a Haunch or Neck of Venison.

RUB it with falt, and let it lie four or five days; flour and boil it in a cloth: to every pound of venifon allow a quarter of an hour. For fauce—boil fome cauliflowers in milk and water, fome turnips, young cabbages, and beet-roots. Lay the venifon in the middle, and the vegetables round.

To roaft Venison.

WHEN it is fpitted, put over it a fheet of paper, then a pafte of flour and water, over that a fheet of thick paper well tied on: a haunch, if it be large, will take four hours; a neck and fhoulder about two hours and a half, according to the fize: juft before it is fent to table, take off the papers and pafte; flour, and bafte it with butter. For fauce—gravy and fweet fauce in feparate boats.

To drefs a Breast of Venison.

ROAST it or fry it; put fome gravy into a flewpan, with a little flour, red wine, and currant jelly, a little lemon-juice; boil thefe together; put in the venifon, just let it heat, without boiling.

To stew Venijon.

TAKE a pint of good gravy, as much red wine, a large fpoonful of currant jelly; cut the venifon into flices, and flour it; put it with the ingredients into a flewpan. let it fimmer till tender; take up the venifon; thicken the fauce with a piece of butter rolled in flour, and pour over the meat.

To fry Venifon.

IF it is the neck or breaft, bone it : if the fhoulder, the meat must be cut off the bones in flices : make fome gravy with the bones; then take the meat and fry it of a light brown, take it up and keep it hot before the fire; put fome flour to the butter in the pan, and keep ftirring it till it is quite thick and brown; take care it does not burn; ftir in half a pound of fine fugar beat to powder, put in the gravy that came from the bones, and fome red wine; make it the thickness of a fine cream, squeeze in the juice of a lemon; warm the venifon in it, put it in the dish, and pour the fauce over it.

To pot Venison.

POUR red wine over the veniion, and put 'about a pound of butter at top; put a pafte over the pan, bake it well, take it clean from the gravy, beat it with the butter that rifes to the top, and more if neceffary, pepper, falt, and pounded mace; pot it, fet it into the oven for a few minutes; pour over clarified butter.

To drefs the Umbles of Deer.

TAKE the kidneys of a deer, with the fat of the heart; feafon them with a little pepper, falt, and nutmeg; first fry them, and then stew them in fome good gravy, till they are tender; squeeze in a little lemon: take the skirts and stuff them with a forcemeat made with the star of the venifon, some star of bacon, grated bread, pepper, mace, sage and onion chopped very small; mix it with the yolk of an egg; when the skirts are stuffed with this forcemeat, tie them to the spit to roast, but first lard them with thyme and lemon-peel: when they are done, lay the skirts in the middle of the dist, the fricase round it.

HARE AND LEVERET.

IN the choice of a hare, both the age and frefhnefs are to be confidered; if the claws are blunt and rugged, the ears dry and tough, and the cleft wide and large, it is old; if, on the contrary, the claws are fmooth and fharp, the ears tear eafily, and the eleft in the lip not much fpread, it is young. If frefh and newly killed, the body will be ftiff, and the flefh pale: if the flefh is turning black, and the body limber, it is not new. But a hare is never bad till it fmells.

To know a real leveret : there fhould be a knob or fmall bone near the foot, on its fore leg; if not, it must be a hare.

To roaft a Hare.

STUFF it with a pudding made of bread-crumbs, chopped fuet, the liver parboiled and bruifed, lemon-peel grated, fhred parfley, and fweet herbs, pepper, falt, nutmeg, the yolks of two eggs; few up the hare; put a quart of fmall beer into the dripping-pan, or three pints, according to the fize of the hare; bafte it with this till the whole is ufed, then flour the hare and bafte it with butter; fend it to table with a fine froth. I have tried all the different things recommended to bafte a hare with, and never found any thing fo good as fmall beer. A fmall hare will take an hour and a half, a large hare two hours. For fauce—gravy, melted butter, and fweet fauce.

To drefs a Hare.

WHEN the hare is cafed, cut it in two juft below the ribs, cut the fore-quarters into pieces, and put them into a clean frewpan, with a blade or two of mace, an onion fluck with cloves, fome whole pepper, an anchovy, and a bunch of fweet herbs; cover them with water, and let them flew gently; make a pudding, and put into the belly of the other part; lard and roaft it, flour and bafte it well with butter or fmall beer: when the flew is tender, take it out with a fork into a difh, and flrain off the liquor; put into it a glafs of red wine, a fpoonful of good ketchup, and a piece of butter rolled in flour; fhake all together over the fire till it is of a good thicknefs: take up the roaft hare, and lay it in the middle of the difh, with the flew round, and fauce poured over it.—Some good gravy in a boat.

Another Way to drefs a Harc.

STUFF the hare, lard it, and trufs it as for roafting; put it into a fifh-kettle, and put in two quarts of ftrong beef-gravy, one of red-wine, a lemon cut in flices, a bunch of fweet herbs, a nutmeg, fome pepper, a little falt, and a few cloves; cover it very clofe, and let it fimmer over a flow fire till it is three parts done; then take it up and put it into a difh, and ftrew it over with crumbs of bread, a few fweet herbs chopped fine, fome grated lemon-peel, and half a nutmeg; fet it before the fire, and bafte it till it is of a fine light brown: while the hare is doing, fcum the gravy, thicken it with the yolk of an egg, and a piece of butter rolled in flour: when the hare is enough, put it into the difh, the reft in a boat.

Hare hashed,

CUT it into finall pieces: if any of the pudding is left, rub it finall in fome gravy; to which put a glafs of red wine, a little pepper and falt, an onion, a flice of lemon; tofs it up till ho: through; take out the onion and lemon.

Hare Sewed.

CUT off the legs and thoulders, cut out the back-bone; cut the meat which comes off the fides into pieces; put all into a veffel, with three-quarters of a pint of fmall beer, the fame of water, a large onion fluck with cloves, fome whole pepper, a flice of lemon, fome falt; flew this gently for an hour, clofe covered; then put to it a quart of good gravy; flew it gently two hours longer, or till tender; take out the hare, rub half a fpoonful of flour fmooth in a little gravy; put it to the fauce, boil it up; add chyan and falt, if necefiary; put in the hare : when hot through, ferve it in a tureen difh. It is an exceeding good difh.

Hare jugged.

CUT it and put it into a jug, with the fame ingredients as before (but neither water nor beer) cover it clofe; fet it into a kettle of boiling water, which keep boiling three hours, or till the hare is tender; then pour the gravy into a flewpan, put to it a glats of red wine, and more gravy if there is not fufficient, a little chyan; thicken with fome flour; boil it up, pour it over the hare; a little lemon-juice.

Hare jugged another Way.

JOINT and cut it into pieces; take the liver, feald, and bruife it with the back of a fpoon, mix it with a little beaten mace, grated lemon-peel, pepper, falt, thyme, and parfley fhred fmall, and a whole onion with a clove or two fluck in it; lay the head and neck at the bottom of a jar or jug, lay on it fome feafoning, a very thin flice of fat bacon, then fome hare, feafoning, and bacon, till all is put in; ftop the jug very clofe with a cork, to prevent any water from getting in, or the fteam from evaporating; fet it in a pot of water; let it boil three hours, or ull the hare is tender; then have ready fome ftrong beef-gravy boiling, and pour it into the jug, till the hare is more than covered; fhake it round, and pour it into the difh; take out the onion. Have fome gravy in the difh, if there fhould not be enough.

Some lard the pieces of hare, and leave out the flices of bacon.

To drefs a Hare the Swifs Way.

TAKE a hare, cut it in quarters, and lard them, ftrew over them fome pepper, falt, and beaten cloves; put them into a ftewpan, with beef-broth enough to cover them; fet the ftewpan over a very gentle fire, covered down very close, and let them flew till they are three-parts done; then pour in a bottle of red port; fet it on again till it is enough: when the hare is near done make the following fauce—Parboil the liver, and then bruife it with the back of a fpoon; put this, with what blood could be faved from the hare, into a faucepan, with half a fpoonful of vinegar; fet it upon the fire; and while it is heating, chop a fpoonful of capers, and the meat of a dozen olives; mix thefe together with the ingredients in the faucepan; make them quite hot.

Take out the hare, lay the pieces in a difh, and pour the fauce over them.

To pot a Hare.

LET it hang for fome days; cut it into pieces, bake it, with a little beer at the bottom of the pan, fome butter on the top; pick it from the bones and finews, beat it with the butter from the top of the gravy, adding enough to make it very mellow; falt, pepper, and pounded cloves; put it into pots, fet it a few minutes into a flack oven; pour over clarified butter.

Hare-Cake in Jelly.

BONE the hare, pick out the finews, add an equal quantity of beef; chop thefe and pound them; add frefh mufhrooms, efchalot (and garlic, if agreeable) fweet herbs, pepper, and falt, two or three eggs; mix thefe with bacon and pickled cucumbers cut like dice, put it into a mould fheeted with flices of bacon; cover it, bake it in a moderate oven; when cold, turn it out: lay over it the following jelly:—a pound and a half of crag of veal, a flice of ham, two or three cloves, a little nutmeg, fome fweet herbs, a carrot or two, fome efchalot, two bay-leaves, an ounce of ifinglafs, with fome beef-broth; flew this till it will jelly; pafs it through a fine fieve, then through a bag; add fome lemon-juice.

PARTRIDGES.

To choofe Partridges.

THEY are in feafon in autumn. If young, the bill is of a dark colour, and the legs yellowifh; if new, the vent will be firm; if they are old, the bill will be white, and the legs blue; if ftale, the vent will look greenifh, and the fkin will peel when touched with the hand.

To boil Partridges.

LET them be covered with water: fifteen minutes will boil hem. For fauce—celery fauce, liver fauce, mushroom fauce, or onion fauce.

Partridges stewed.

STUFF the craws with bread-crumbs, a bit of butter, lemoncel grated, efchalot chopped, parfley, pepper, falt, nutmeg; yolk f egg; rub the infide with pepper and falt; half-roaft them; tew them with cullis, or rich gravy, and a little Madeira, an nion, a piece of lemon-peel, favory, fpice, if neceffary, for bout half an hour: take out the onion and lemon-peel; nicken it with a little flour; add chyan, ketchup, &c. if neceftry: boil it up. Garnifh with hard yolks of eggs; and rtichoke-bottoms boiled and quartered.

[Partridge with aspic sauce. See Chickens.] [Partridge à-la-Braize. See Chickens.]

Partridge to roaft.

IT will be done in less than half an hour. For fauce-gravy nd bread fauce.

Partridges in Panes.

TWO or three roafted partridges, if under-done, the better; ix them with the crumb of a penny loaf, or more, foaked well ith hot gravy, lialf a pound of fat bacon fcraped, two artiiokes, and a few truffles and morels, boiled and chopped, yolks eggs, pepper, falt, nutmeg, and grated lemon-peel; put this to moulds in the fhape of an egg, fheeted with thin flices of t bacon. Serve them with jelly between and over them.

Partridges à-la-Paisanne.

WHEN they are picked and drawn, trufs the partridges, and it them upon an iron fkewer; tie them to the fpit, lay them wn to roaft; put a piece of fat bacon upon a toafting-fork, and old it over the partridges, that as it melts it may drop upon them they roaft: when they are well bafted with this, duft over em fome crumbs of bread, and fome falt; cut fome efchalots ry fine, with a little gravy, falt, and pepper, and the juice of lf a lemon; mix all these together over the fire, and thicken em up; pour them into a dish, and lay the partridges upon em.

Partridges à-la-Polonese.

TAKE a brace of partridges; when they are picked and drawn, put a piece of butter into their bellies, put them on the fpit, and then cover them with flices of bacon, over that with paper, and then lay them down to a moderate fire: while they are roafting, cut fome efchalots very fine, and as much parfley; mix thefe together, and add fome thin flices of ginger, with fome pepper and falt; take a piece of butter, and work them up into a fliff paffe: when the partridges are near enough, take them up, gently raife up the wings and legs; under each wing and leg put a piece of the paffe, then hold them tight together, and fqueeze over them a fmall quantity of orange-juice, and a good deal of zeft from the peel. Send them up hot, with fome good gravy in a fauce boat.

Partridges à-la-Ruffe.

TAKE fome young partridges; when they are picked and drawn, cut them into quarters, and put them into fome white wine; then fet on a frewpan, with flices of bacon, over a brifk fire; throw in the partridges, turn them two or three times; then pour in a glafs of brandy, and fet them over a flow fire; when they have frewed fome time, put in a few mufhrooms cut in flices, and fome good gravy; let them fimmer brifkly, and take up the fat as it rifes: when they are done, put in a piece of butter rolled in flour, and fquegze in the juice of a lemon.

Partridges rolled.

TAKE young partridges, and lard them with ham and bacon; ftrew over them fome pepper and falt, with fome beaten mace, fome fhred lemon-peel, and fweet herbs cut fmall; then take fome thin beef-fteaks, (there muft be no holes in them;) ftrew over thefe fome of the feafoning, and then fqueeze on them fome lemon-juice; lay a partridge upon each fteak, and roll it up; tie it round to keep it together, and pepper the outfide. Set on a ftewpan with fome flices of bacon, and an onion cut into pieces; lay the partridges carefully in, put to them fome rich gravy, and let them ftew gently till they are done; then take the partridges out of the beef, lay them in a difh, and pour over them fome rich effence of ham.

PHEASANTS.

To choose Pheasants.

THEY are of the English cock and hen kind, very beautiful, nd of a fine flavour : the hen is much valued when with egg: he cock has fpurs, the hen has not : if the cock pheafant is oung, the fpurs fhould be fhort and blunt, or round; if they are ong and fharp, he is old. Examine the hen at the vent; if hat is open and green. it is a fign fhe is ftale; if fhe is with tg, it will be foft; if they are ftale, and are rubbed hard with he finger, the fkin will peel.

To roaft Pheafants.

THEY must be kept at a distance from the fire; flour them, nd baste them often with butter; half an hour will roast them a good fire. For fauce—gravy and bread fauce. When they roasted, stick fome feathers on the tail. Pheafants may be rded.

To boil Pheasants.

BOIL them in a great deal of water; if large, three quarters an hour will boil them; if finall half an hour. For fauce hite celery flewed and thickened with cream, a bit of butter lled in flour; lay the pheafants in the difh, and pour the fauce er them.

To stew Pheafants.

STEW them in a ftrong veal gravy (the gravy muft more an cover them); while they are doing (which muft be very ntly) take fome articloke bottoms parboiled and cut into eces, fome roafted chefnuts blanched and cut into four, a le mace beat fine, fome pepper, falt, and a little white ne: when the gravy is half wafted, fcum it very clean. and t in the ingredients; if it is not thick enough, put into it a ce of butter rolled in flour; let it boil; if there is any m, take it off: lay the pheafants in the difh, and pour the ice over them.

Pheasants à l'Italienne.

TAKE the livers, and cut them fmall : if only one pheafant to be dreffed, take but half a dozen oyfters, parboil them, and them into a flewpan, with the liver, a piece of butter, fome en onions, and fome parfley, pepper, and falt, fome fweet bs, and a little allfpice; let them ftand a very little time over fire, and fteff the pheafants with them; then put it into a wpan, with fome oil, green onions, parfley, fweet-bafil, and non-juice, for a few minutes; take them off, cover the rafant with flices of bacon, and put it upon a fpit; tie fome per round it while it is roafting. Take fome oyfters, ftew them a little in their own liquor; take a flewpan, put into it the yolks of four eggs, half a lemon cut into fmall dice, a little beaten pepper, a little foraped nutmeg, a little parfley cut fmall, a rocombole, an anchovy cut fmall, a little oil, a fmall glafs of white wine, a piece of butter, and a little ham cullis; put the fauce over the fire to thicken, take care it does not burn; put in the oyfters, and make the fauce relifning: when the pheafant is done, lay it in the dith, and pour the fauce over it.

Pheasant à. la-Braize.

TAKE a flewpan, put a layer of beef at the bottom, then the fame of yeal, a thin flice of bacon, a little bit of carrot, an onion fluck with cloves, a bunch of fweet herbs, fome black and white pepper, and a little beaten mace; then put in the pheafant, lay over it a layer of veal, and the fame of beef to cover it; fet it upon the fire five or fix minutes; then pour in two quarts of boiling water; cover it down very clofe, and put a damp cloth round the outfide of the cover, to prevent the steam evaporating: it will take an hour and a half, as it must few very gently: then take up the pheafant, and keep it hot; let the gravy flew till there is about a pint; ftrain it off, and put it into a faucepan, with a fweetbread, which must have been stewed with the pheafant, fome truffles and morels, fome liver of fowls, artichoke-bottoms, and afparagus tops : let these fimmer together in the gravy, then add two fpoonfuls of ketchup, two of red wine, and a little piece of butter rolled in flour: let them flew five or fix minutes: lay the pheafant in the difh, pour the ragout over it, and lay round the difh a few forcemeat balls,

SPICES.

Ginger.

GINGER is a root which grows in the Eaft-Indies, and in many parts of America: the plant which fprings from it has leaves like flags; it bears fmall flowers. The beft comes from Calcutta, but very good from many other places. It is dug up in autumn, then wathed, and fpread on thin hurdles, supported on treffels. That which is found, and of the deepeft yellow, is beft.

Cloves.

WE have cloves from the Dutch. They have deftroyed them in the Molucca iflands, and are propagating them in the island of Ternate. They are the fruit of a large beautiful tree, and are gathered before they are ripe. The tree has leaves like the bay. The clove is first green; as foon as it begins to turn a little brown, it is gathered, long before it is ripe. What are left upon the trees grow very large, and are called the mother of loves: the finall ones are gathered in the middle of the day, and aid in a shady, airy place to dry.

Mace and Nutmeg.

THESE two fpices are produced from the fame tree, which s large and beautiful; the leaves are long, and of a fine green; he flower is like an apple-bloffom; the fruit is round, and he fize of a middling peach, which it very much refembles. The nutmeg is the kernel, and is covered by the mace. The ruit is cut open, the mace taken off, and that and the nutmeg tre dried in a cool, airy place.

Some diffinguish the nutmeg into male and female. The common nutmeg is the female; the other is longer, and lefs aluable. They are produced from the fame tree, which is not inlike our pear-tree in its manner of growing. Its leaves, whether green or dried, have, when bruised, a very agreeable mell. It grows in the East-Indies. The best mace is fost, ily, and fragrant. The nutmeg should be found, hard and neavy, of a pale colour on the outfide, and finely marbled within.

The Dutch fupply us with nutmegs and mace, the whole pice-trade being in their hands.

Cinnamon.

CINNAMON is the produce of the ifland of Ceylon. It is the inner bark of 'a beautiful tree. The leaves are like those of bay-tree; of a fine spicy taste, and most agreeable smell. The bark, when sresh, has little taste; its flavour grows higher s it dries. The finest is in small quills, of a bright colour, a rong smell, and a sharp biting taste. Sometimes they extract n oil from it before it is brought over; it is then very inspid, nd cassia bark is often amongst it. The taste is the best way i judge of its excellence; that which has lost its oil, is less sharp nd quick. After holding the cassia fometime in the mouth, it irns to a kind of jelly.

Pepper.

THERE are three kinds of pepper; the black, the white, and the long. The Chyan and Jamaica pepper are not of that kind, though called by that name. There are two forts of white pepper; one is made by fteeping black pepper in fea water, and then taking off the fkin; the other is the fruit of a different plant, but very like the black pepper. Thefe are both long trailing plants; they have jointed ftalks, and are fmall: the fruit follows them. It is first green, then reddish, and of a deep purple when ripe, but grows black and wrinkled when dreffing.

Pepper is gathered in November; the white is larger and milder than the black. It comes from the East Indies. That which is largest, and most free from dust, is the best. The long pepper is of the fame nature, but milder.

Allspice.

THIS fpice is called Jamaica pepper, from the place of its growth; and allfpice, from its having the tafte of all other fpices. It is the fruit of a large tree: the leaves are broad; the flowers are fmall, and grow in bunches; after which comes the fruit, which is gathered when ripe, and dried in the fhade. When it is good, it is large, full, and of a good colour. It is a very good fpice for common ufe, but not equal to the others in flavour.

Turmerick.

IS the root of a plant of an oblong figure; it is generally in pieces from half an inch to an inch in length; and at the utmost furface, the thickness of a man's little finger; it is very heavy, hard to break, and not eafily cut with a knife: the outfide is of a fine whitish grey, with a tinge of faint vellow; but, when it is broke, the infide is of a fine yellow, if the root is fresh. It grows redder by keeping, till at last it will become of the colour of faffron in the cake; thrown into water, it foon gives it a fine yellow tinge. It is eafily powdered in a mortar, and, according to its different age, makes a yellow, an orange-colour, or reddish powder. It has a kind of aromatic fmell, fomething like ginger; the taste is acrid, disagreeable, and bitter. It is brought from the East Indies, where they use it in fauces and foods.

SALTS.

THERE are two kinds of falt; the common, and falt-petre. The first is made from the fea-water, from falt-fprings, or elie ug out of the ground. The other is collected from old walls, r the cliffs of rocks, in a rough flate; or from certain earth, and fterwards refined. We have the falt-petre rough from the Eaft, nd we refine it here. The common falt, of feveral kinds, is ug or made in Europe.

Of the common falt there are four different kinds; fea falt, iy falt, rock falt, and balket falt. Sea falt is made by boiling id evaporating fea water over the fire. Bay falt, by evaporatg fea water, in pits clayed on the infide, by the heat of the in. Balket falt is made by boiling away the water of falt rings over the fire. Rock falt is dug out of the ground, and hen very fine, is called falt-gemme. There are only two kinds falt-petre; they go by different names: that which is purified called falt-petre, and that which is rough as it comes from road, is called petre-falt. The pure falt-petre is much ftronger an the other.

SUGAR.

SUGAR is the product of the East and West Indies. It is kind of reed, but is called a fugar-cane. The reed is of the ture of ours, only much larger. The fugar is made of its ce boiled up to a confistence. At first it is very coarfe and own, but is refined, after it is brought over, by our fugarkers.

OIL.

THERE are many forts of oil, but only one ufed for the ole, which is that produced by the olive. Those which we , are gathered before they are ripe; but when the oil is to be fied from them, they are left upon the tree till full ripe, and fied when they are almost rotten. We have oil from most the warm parts of Europe, but it is different in purity and ue, by the lefter or greater care taken in the making of it. lian oil is generally the finest. That of Lucca and Florence particularly effecemed. They make very good oil in France. the choice of oil we are to judge by the finell and tafte. It ould be free from both. In general any finell or tafte is a lt. Oil should be quite pure and infipid, its only quality being nefs. In cold weather, oil congeals, and its purity may be fied by its appearance; for the finer the oil, the finaller are lumps.

VINEGAR:

To make common Vinegar.

TAKE a middling fort of beer, but indifferently hopped; when it has done working, and is quite fine, put into it fome rapes; mash them together in a tub, let it stand till it fettles, then draw it off very clear, and put it into a cask; cover the bung with a piece of slate, then fet it where the fun may come upon it, for thirty-five or forty days; by that time it will be fit for use. It is very good fined, and kept from growing musty.

Vinegar made of Sugar and Water.

TO two quarts of water put one pound of brown fugar, boil and fcum it well; add two quarts of cold water, and work it with a toast fpread with yeast; ftir it nine days fucceffively, then put it into a cask, and let it stand from April till September in the fun; the cask not stopped, but covered with a board.

White-Wine Vinegar.

FILL a cafk with good white wine, but do not put in the bung; fet it where the fun may come upon it, or in any other hot place; in a little time it will be fit for ufe.

Vinegar of foul Wine.

BOIL it till one-third is wafted; while it is boiling, take care to four it very clear; then put it into a cafk, and fome chervil with it; ftop it clofe, and it will foon be fit for ufe. Vinegar may be made of any fruits, flowers, herbs, or roots, by putting them into the vinegar, and letting them fland till it finells or taftes of them.

Garlic Vinegar.

A quart of vinegar, eight cloves of garlic, two fliced nutmegs, and fixty cloves.

Goofeberry Vinegar.

BRUISE fome goofeberries that are quite ripe, and to three quarts of water put one of goofeberries; let it ftand twenty-four hours, then ftrain it through canvafs, and after that through a flannel bag; put one pound of coarfe fugar to every gallon of this liquor; ftir it well together; put it into a cafk, and let u ftand nine or ten months, then it will be fit for ufe. The longer it ftands the better.

The water must be boiled, and stand till it is cold, before it is mixed with the gooseberries. This is good vinegar for pickling.

Raisin Vinegar.

TO every two pounds of Malaga raifins put four quarts of pring water; lay a tile over the bung, and fet it in the fun till it if for ufe. A flone bottle will do as well as a cafk.: If it is ut in the chimney-corner, and kept there a proper time, it does is well as if fet in the fun.

Vinegar of Roses.

TAKE dried rofes, put them into double glaffes, or a ftone ottle; a handful or more to a quart of white-wine vinegar; fet nem in the fun, or by the fire, or in a warm oven, till their virie is extracted; then ftrain it, and keep it for ufe.

Tarragon Vinegar.

TO every gallon of ftrong white-wine vinegar put a pound of rragon leaves, ftripped from the ftalks juft as it is going to oom; put it with the vinegar into a ftone jug, to foment for a rtnight, then run it through a flannel bag; to every four galns of vinegar put half an ounce of ifinglass diffolved in cyder; ix it well with the vinegar: then put it into large bottles, and it ftand one month to fine; then rack it off, and put it into at bottles for use.

Elder-flower Vinegar.

GATHER the elder-flowers before they are too much own; pick them clean from the great flaiks, and dry them in fun, when it is not too hot; put a handful of them to a quart the beft white-wine vinegar, and let it fland twelve or fourteen ys; then flrain it, and draw it off, and put it into the veffel, t keep a quart out, and make it very hot; put it into the veffel make it ferment; then flop it close for use, and draw it off te wanted.

To make Verjuice.

Green bramble-berries put into good wine, will make vinegar in an hour.

TRUFFLES.

TRUFFLES grow like mufhrooms, but never appear above the ground in their natural flate. They generally lie ten inches deep; after they are ripe, they rot in the ground, and young ones grow in great numbers from every old truffle which decays. The truffle has a very rich, tart, and high flavour, when frefh, but lofes it in a great meafure when dried; however, they are generally ufed in made diffues. They are common in France and Italy, and we have them in fome parts of England.

MORELS.

MORELS are likewife of the mußhroom kind, but they rife above the earth about three inches, of the bignefs of an egg, of a dufky-whitish colour; they have a higher flavour fresh than dry. They grow in England, but are more common and richer in flavour in the warmer parts of Europe.

CHYAN PEPPER.

THE plant which bears this pod, is raifed fometimes in our gardens. Its proper name is capficum. From its growing in Africa, it is called Guinea pepper; and Chyan pepper, from its growth in America. The pods are long, and when ripe, of a fmooth fine red colour. Some call it garden-coral. The powder of this is called chyan pepper, and is made as follows:

The pods are gathered when full ripe; they are opened, the feeds taken out, and the pods laid to dry in the fun; when quite dry, they are beaten to'a coarfe powder. This powder is chyan pepper in the plaineft way, but there are many ways of preparing it. Some mix bay-falt with it, and others powder of multtooms.

MUSHROOMS.

MUSHROOMS are very useful for fauces and made dishes, but great care should be taken to procure the right fort. ' Those are good which grow upon commons, but are liable to be mixed with bad ones; therefore it is belt to use those from the hot-beds. The upper part of the right fort are of a roundish form, like a button; the flalks white, the under part, or gills, of a fine pale red, but when broken, are very white ; when they are left in the ground, they grow very large and flat, and the red part changes to a very dark colour. When they are finall, they are called buttons, and are fit for pickling; but when they grow large, they are called flaps, and are put to other uses, which will be mentioned hereafter. Those which are a fize between the buttons and flaps, are fit to use fresh. The bad fort, which are picked up amongst those that grow naturally on the commons and in the ields, are not fo flat at the top; the under part, or gills, is white, attead of the fine red; if they are rubbed with the fingers, they urn yellow, and when pickled are never white.

The true German Way of making Sour Crout, or Sour Cabbage.

TAKE white cabbages, and clean them well from all the reen and fuperfluous leaves; cut through the middle, and take te hearts out; cut and flice the cabbages as fmall as poffible, but it them no longer than they are perfectly nice and fine. Rub e infide of the cafk well with yeaft, it will help to four the cabige, and prevent the falt liquor from running out. When ere is a quantity cut (not all which is to be done), fpread it oon a dry table, falt it moderately, and roll it well. Do not ill too much at a time, as it cannot be worked through fuffiently; strew a little coriander-seed over it, if agreeable. Put into the cafk, and prefs it down very hard; repeat this till the Ik is quite full; cover it with vine-leaves, put a dry cloth over em, and leave it till next morning, then put on the head of the sk over the leaves and cloth, and put a very heavy weight on it, to keep it quite close. October is the proper time to do ; it will be fit to eat in two months. When the cabbage is ken out to drefs, be careful to take off all that looks whitish; is not good till it begins to grow yellow; the deeper the cabbage s, the finer and better it will be. When what is wanted is cen out for one dreffing, cover the cabbage with vine-leaves, long as they can be got, and when they fail, with a dry cloth. take great care the falt liquor does not run out, if it does, the bage will infallibly fpoil. Boil the cabbage with a good deal butter in a well-tinn'd veffel; put no more water than just ough to cover it, with a sheet of paper over it, and let it hoil fufficiently done.

To keep Cabbage Lettuce.

AT the latter end of the feafon, take fome very dry fand, and ver the bottom of a barrel made on purpofe; then put in the uces fo as not to touch each other; there muft not be above p rows laid one upon another; cover them well with fand, I fet them in a dry place; be very careful the froft does not ne at them: the lettuce muft not be cut, but pulled at the root.

PICKLES.

LWAYS use stone jars for hot pickles, as vinegar will penetrate through all earthen veffels, stone and glass excepted. Never let the hand touch the pickle, but us a pickle-spoon to every jar.

To pickle Cucumbers.

THE fmall long fort are the beft; let them be frefh gathered. It off the bloffoms, do not rub them; pour over them a ftrong unic of falt and water, boiling hot; cover them clofe, let them fund all night; the next day ftir them gently, to take off the fand; drain them on a fieve, and dry them with a cloth: make a pickle with the beft white wine vinegar, ginger, pepper long and round, garlic if not difliked; when the pickle boils, throw in the cucumbers, cover them, make them boil up as quick as poffible for three or four minutes; put them into a jar with the pickle, and cover them very clofe; when cold, put in a fprig of dill, the feed downward. They will be exceedingly crifp and green done in this manner; but if they do not look quite fo green as they fhould, boil up the pickle again the next day, and pour it on the cucumbers immediately.

Another Way.

PUT them in a ftone jar; take as much fpring-water as will cover them : to every gallon of water, put as much falt as will bear an egg; make it boiling hot, and pour it upon the cucumbers; cover them with a woollen cloth, and over that a pewter difh; tie them down clofe, and let them fland twenty-four hours, then take them out, lay them upon a cloth and dry them ; wipe the jar clean, put in the cucumbers, with a little dill and fennel; then take fome vinegar; to every three quarts, put in one quart of fpring-water, till there is enough to cover them; put in a little bay-falt, and a little white-falt; to every gallon of pickle put one nutmeg cut in quarters, a quarter of an ounce of cloves, and the fame of mace, a quarter of an ounce of whole pepper, and a large race of ginger fliced: boil thefe all up together; pour the pickle boiling hot upon the cucumbers, and cover them as before. Let them stand two days, then cover them again, if they are not green, boil them again, and when cold, cover them with a bladder and leather : keep pickles always close covered, and under the pickle'; a wooden spoon, with holes in it, is the best thing to take them out with.

N.B. Observe not to boil the fpice, but to pour the boiling vinegar over it.

Sliced Gucumbers.

PARE them, and flice them a little thicker than for the table ; out them into a cullender, with a handful of falt; the next day iry them, put them into a jar with fliced onion, and horfe-radifh n layers. Make a pickle with white-wine vinegar, mace, loves, nutmeg fliced, and whole pepper; boil this half an hour, nd pour it on the cucumbers immediately: if they are to look s if freth cut, ufe double diffilled vinegar; but they eat quite as vell with white-wine vinegar.

Onions.

PEEL fmall onions into falt and water; fhift them once a day or three days, then fet them over the fire in milk and water till eady to boil; dry them; pour over them the following pickle when boiled, and cold—Double-diftilled vinegar, falt, mace, a ay-leaf, or two; they will not look white with any other vinegar.

Mushrooms.

PUT fome buttons into milk and water, wipe them from it ith a piece of flannel, and throw them into fpring-water and lt; boil fome falt and water, put in the buttons, boil them up our or five minutes; drain them quick; cover them clofe beveen two cloths, and dry them well; boil a pickle of doubleftilled vinegar and mace; when cold, put in the buttons; pour il on the top: they flould be put into fmall glaffes, as they do ot keep well after they are opened. I always have them look ; white as poffible done in this manner, and keep the year round. N. B. Some boil them in milk, which is a very good way.

Walnuts.

PUT a hundred of large double nuts into a ftone jar; také ur ounces of black pepper, one ounce of Jamaica pepper, two inces of ginger, one ounce of cloves, one pint of muftard-feed, head or two of garlic, four handfuls of falt; bruife the fpice id the muftard-feed, and boil them in vinegar fufficient to cover e nuts; when cold, put it to them: two days after boil up the ckle: pour it to the nuts immediately: cover them clofe: peat it three days.

Another Way.

TO a hundred of walnuts put half a pound of whole black opper, a quarter of a pound of race ginger fliced thin, half a bund of flour of muftard, a handful of the tops of garlic'; fill the jar with vinegar; cover it close with a bladder: as the vinegar waftes fill up the jar.

N. B. According to the first receipt, they are not fit to eat under fix or eight months: to the latter (which is the best) twelve months; but they are then exceedingly good, and never turn either black or fost, which they always do when done first in falt and water.

To pickle Walnuts to look Green.

TAKE the largest double walnuts, pare them very thin, and put them into a tub of fpring-water as they are pared, put to them, if two or three hundred of nuts, a pound of bay-falt; leave them in the water four and twenty-hours, then put them into a ftone jar, a layer of vine-leaves and a layer of walnuts : fill it up with cold vinegar, and when they have flood all night, pour the vinegar from them into a copper, with a good quantity of bay-falt; fet it upon the fire and let it boil, then pour it hot on the nuts; tie them over with a woollen cloth, and let them ftand a week; then pour the pickle from them, rub the nuts clean with a piece of flannel, and put them again into the jar with vine-leaves as before mentioned; boil fresh vinegar; to every gallon of vinegar, four or five pieces of ginger, a quarter of an ounce of cloves, a nutmeg fliced, a quarter of an ounce of mace, the fame of whole black pepper; pour the vinegar boiling hot upon the walnuts, and cover them with a woollen cloth; let it ftand four or five days, and repeat the fame four or five times; when the vinegar is cold, put in half a pint of muftard-feed, a flick of horfe-radifh fliced, tie them down close with a bladder, and then with leather; they will be fit to eat in three weeks; if they are defigned to be kept, the vinegar mult not be boiled, but then they will not be ready under fix months.

French Beans.

POUR over them a boiling hot brine, cover them clofe; the next day drain and dry them; pour over them a boiling hot pickle of white-wine vinegar, Jamaica pepper, and black pepper, a little mace and ginger: repeat this for two or three days, or till they look green.

Mangoes of Melons or Cucumbers.

POUR over them falt and water boiling hot; the next day dry them; cut a piece out of the fide, fcrape out the feed very clean; fill them with garlic, fcraped horfe-radifh, and muftardfeed; put in the piece, and tie it in close, then pour over them boiling hot vinegar: in two or three days, boil up the vinegar, with pepper, cloves, and ginger; throw in the mangoes; boil them up quick for a few minutes; put them into a jar; cover them close: the melons should be small; the cucumbers large. If they are not green enough, boil the vinegar again.

Another IFay to pickle Mangoes.

TAKE out the feeds of either melons or cucumbers, wipe them quite dry, fill them with mustard-feed, a little garlic, two . cloves of efchalot, nutmeg and ginger fliced, fome mace, whole pepper, and cloves, with a little falt; then tie or few on the piece, put them into a jar with cold vinegar (enough to cover them) and a good quantity of made multard, a handful of falt, and two or three bay-leaves; let them fland nine days, then boil up the pickle, and pour it on the mangoes; on the third day boil it up again, and pour it on the mangoes, let them stand to be cold, ind then tic them down close. If they are liked green, they must be done just before they are used: put them into a brass or pell-metal pot, and let them fcald over the fire till they are of a ine green, but be fure not to let them boil.

Garlic hickled.

PICK it very clean; put it over a brifk fire in falt and water, and boil it up quick : drain and dry it : make a pickle of doubleliftilled vinegar and falt, which pour on boiling hot: repeat it he next day.

Nasturtium Buds.

AS foon as the bloffoms are off gather the little knobs; put nem into cold falt and water; shift them once a day for three ays: make a cold pickle of white-wine vinegar, a little whiterine, eschalot, pepper, cloves, mace, nutmeg quartered, and orfe-radifh : put in the buds.

Barberries.

PUT maiden barberries into a jar, with a good quantity of ilt and water; tie on a bladder: when the liquor fcums over, Codlins.

THEY should be the fize of a large walnut: or if they are such larger, they are not the worfe: put vine-leaves in the ottom of a brafs-pan; lay in the codlins; coverathem with leaves, then with water: fet them over a gentle fire till they will peel; peel them, and put them into the fame water, with vineleaves at top and bottom; cover them clofe over a flow fire till they become green: when they are cold take off the end whole, cutting it round with a little knife; fcoop out the core, fill the apple with garlic and muftard-feed; put on the bit, and fet that end uppermoft in the pickle, which is double-diftilled vinegar cold, with a little mace and cloves: white-wine vinegar will do.

Radifh Pods.

... AS French beans.

Cauliflower.

PULL it into bunches, throw it for one minute into fpringwater and falt boiling, then into cold fpring-water; dry it; cover it with double-diftilled vinegar: in a week put fresh vinegar, with a little mace and nutmeg: keep it close covered.

Mango of Spanish Onions.

PEEL the onions, and cut a fmall round piece out of the bottom, and fcoop out a little of the infides; put them in falt and water three days, changing them twice a day; then drain them and ftuff them: first put in flour of mustard feed, then fome ginger cut fmall, a little mace, and fome efchalot cut fmall; then fome more mustard, and fill them up with fome fcraped horferadifh; then put on the bottom piece, tie it on clofe: make a ftrong pickle of white wine vinegar, mace, ginger, nutmeg, fliced horfe-radifh, and fome falt: put in the mangoes, and let them boil up two or three times: Care must be taken they are not boiled too much, for they will then lose their firmnes, and will not keep: put them with the pickle into a jar. The next morning boil up the pickle again, and pour over them.

Mango of Peaches.

TAKE fome peaches of the largeft kind, when they are full grown, and are juft beginning to ripen; throw them into falt and water, with a little bay-falt; let them lie two or three days, covered with a board, then take them out, wipe them dry, and with a fharp pen-knife cut them open; take out the ftone; cut fome garlic very fine, fcrape a great deal of horfe-radifh, mix a great deal of bruifed muftard-feed, a few bruifed cloves, and fome ginger fliced very thin, and fill the hollow of the peaches with this; then tie them round with a thread, and lay them in a:

jar; throw in fome cloves, mace, broken cinnamon, and a finall quantity of cochineal; pour over them as much vinegar as will fill the jar; to every quart put a quarter of a pint of the beft well-made muftard, two or three heads of garlic, fome fliced ginger, fome cloves, mace, and nutmeg; mix the pickle well together, and pour it over the peaches; tie them clofe with a bladder and leather. They will foon be fit to eat.

White plumbs may be done in the fame manner.

To pickle Grapes.

LET the grapes be at their full growth, but not ripe, cut them in fmall bunches; put them in a ftone jar, with vine-leaves between every layer of grapes, till the jar is full : then take as much ipring-water as will be enough to cover the grapes and leaves : as it heats, put in as much falt as will make it a brine ftrong enough to bear an egg, let it be half bay-falt and half common falt : when it boils, fcum it; run it through a flannel bag, and let it ftand to fettle ; by the time it is cold it will be quite fettled : ftrain it again through the bag, and then pour it into the jar to the grapes, which must be well covered; fill the jar with vineleaves, then tie it over with a double cloth, and fet a plate upon it; let it fland two days, then take off the cloth, pour away the brine, and take out the leaves and the fruit, and lay them between two cloths to dry; then take two quarts of vinegar, one quart of fpring-water, and one pound of coarfe fugar; let it boil a little while, fcum it very clean as it boils ; let it ftand till it is quite cold; wipe the jar very clean and dry, put fome fresh vine-leaves at the bottom, between every bunch of grapes, and on the top, then pour and strain the pickle on the grapes; fill he jar; let the pickle be above the grapes; tie on a thin piece of board in a bit of flannel, lay it on the top of the grapes to keep them under the pickle; tie them down with a bladder, and hen leather: always keep them under the pickle.*

To pickle Suckers before the Leaves are hard.

TAKE the fuckers, and pare off all the hard ends of the leaves ind ftalks; feald them in falt and water, and when they are cold out them into glafs bottles, with two or three blades of large mace, and a nutmeg fliced thin; fill them with diffilled vinegar.

To pickle Suckers.

TAKE the young fuckers, peel off the leaves till the white ottom appears; fcrape them as quick as can be, to prevent their turning black; take out all the choke clean with the point of a filver knife, and throw them as they are done into vinegar; boil them in it a quarter of an hour, with fome mace, a few cloves, and a little falt: put a few bay-leaves into the jar or glafs they are kept in.

The green fort are beft, as they have no choke which need be taken out.

Beet Root.

BOIL it till tender, peel it, and if agreeable, cut it into fhapes; pour over it a hot pickle of white-wine vinegar, a little ginger, pepper, and horfe-radifh fliced.

To hickle Red Cabbage.

TAKE two red cabbages, half a peck of French beans, fix fticks, with fix cloves of garlic tied on each of them, and two cauliflowers; wafh them well, and give them one boil; drain them on a fieve, and lay them out by every fingle leaf on a table or dreffer; put them in the fun, or in a flow oven, to dry, and let them be as dry as it is poffible.

The Pickle.

Take half a pound of muftard-feed, wafh and lay it to dry, when it is very dry, bruife half of it; take a quarter of a pound of ginger, cut it in pieces, falt it, and let it ftand a week; take an ounce of pepper, with a gallon of the beft vinegar, and a handful of falt, boil them, and let them ftand till they are cold; lay in a jar a row of cabbage, a row of beans, and cauliflowers, and throw between every row the muftard-feed, fome Jamaica pepper, fome black pepper, fome ginger; mix an ounce of turmeric powdered, put in by degrees alfo the muftard-feed which was not bruifed, pour over the vinegar when all the other ingredients are in; cover over the jar with bladder and leather as ufual. It is better the fecond year than the firft.

Lemons.

THEY fhould be finall, and thick rind; rub them with a piece of flannel, flit them in four parts, a little above half way down, but not through to the pulp; fill the flits hard with falt, fet them upright in a pan, let them ftand four days, or longer if the falt is not melted; turn them three times a day in their own liquor till they are tender: make a pickle of rape vinegar, the brine from the lemons, Jamaica pepper, and ginger; boil and fcum it; when cold put it to the lemons, with two ounces of mustard-feed, three cloves of garlic: this is fufficient for fix lemons.

· Indian Pickle, or Péccalillo.

TAKE white cabbage quartered, cauliflower, cucumbers, melons, apples, French beans, plums; all, or any of thefe; lay them on a hair fieve, ftrew over a large handful of falt, fet them in the fun for three or four days, or till very dry: put them into a ftone jar with the following pickle.—Put a pound of race-ginger into falt and water, the next day forape and flice it, falt it, and dry it in the fun; flice, falt, and dry a pound of garlic: put thefe into a gallon of vinegar, with two ounces of long pepper, half an ounce of turmeric, a quarter of a pound of muftard-feed bruifed; ftop the pickle clofe, then prepare the cabbage, &c. If the fruit is put in it muft be green.

N.B. The jar need never be emptied, but put in the things as they come into feafon, adding fresh vinegar.

Asparagus.

SCRAPE them, and cut off the prime part at the ends; wipe them, and lay them carefully in a gallipot; pour vinegar over them, let them lie in this ten days, or a fortnight; boil fome fresh vinegar, pour it on them hot; repeat this till they are of a good colour, covering them close: add mace and a little nutmeg. They do very well in a made-dith, when afparagus is not to be had; but when they are ufed, lay them a little while in warm water.

To pickle Quinces.

TAKE half a dozen quinces, cut them all to pieces, and put hem in an earthen pot, with a gallon of water, and two pounds of honey; mix all thefe together, and then put them into a kettle o boil leifurely half an hour; ftrain the liquor into an earthen pot, and when it is cold wipe the quinces clean, and put them nto it; they muft be covered very clofe, and they will keep all he year.

To pickle Samphire.

TAKE the famphire that is green, lay it in a clean pan; throw two or three handfuls of falt over it, and cover it with pring-water: let it lie twenty-four hours; then put it into a arge brafs faucepan; throw in a handful of falt; cover it with good vinegar; cover the pan clofe, and fet it over a very flow ire: let it fland till it is just green and crifp, then take it off, for if it is fost it is spoiled; put it into a jar, and cover it elose; when it is cold, tie it down.

Elder Shoots, in Imitation of Bamboo.

TAKE the largeft and youngeft of the elder fhoots, which fprout out in the middle of May: the middle ftalks are the moft tender, and likewife are the largeft; but those which are fmall are not worth doing. Peel off the outward fkin, and lay them in a ftrong brine of falt and water all night, then dry them in a cloth, every piece by itfelf. Make the pickle half white-wine and half beer vinegar: to each quart of pickle put one ounce of white pepper, an ounce of ginger fliced, a little mace, and a little whole Jamaica pepper; boil the fpice in the pickle, and pour it hot upon the fhoots; ftop them close immediately, and fet the jar before the fire: let it ftand two hours, turning it often.

It is a good way to green pickles: if they are not green, boil them two or three times, and pour it on boiling hot.

To hickle green Almonds.

BOIL vinegar according to the quantity which is to be pickled; put into it falt, mace, ginger, Jamaica and white pepper; put it into a jar, and let it ftand till it is cold; then put the almonds to the liquor, and let it cover them: take care to fcum the vinegar before the fpices are put into it.

To hickle Elder-buds.

TAKE elder-buds when they are the fize of hop-buds, make a ftrong brine of falt and water, and put them in for nine days; ftir it two or three times a day; put them into a brafs pan, cover them with vine-leaves, and pour the water on them that they came out of; fet them over a flow fire till they are quite green; then make a pickle for them of allegar (made from four ale) a little mace, a few efchalots, and fome fliced ginger; boil them two or three minutes, and pour them upon the buds: tie them down, and keep them in a very dry place.

Capers.

CAPERS are the flower-buds of a fmall fhrub, preferved in pickle: the tree which bears them is called the caper fhrub or bufh: it is common in the weftern parts of Europe: we have them in fome gardens, but the principal place for pickled capers is at Toulon: we have fome from Lvons, but they are flatter, and lefs firm; and fome come from Majorca, but they are falt and difagreeable: the fineft-flavoured are from Toulon. They ather the buds from the bloffoms before they open, then fpread hem upon the floor in a room where no iun enters, then let nem lie till they begin to wither; they then throw them into a 2b of tharp vinegar; and after three days they add a quantity of ay-falt: when this is diffolved, they are fit for packing for fale, nd are fent to all parts of Europe.

The finest capers are those of a moderate fize, firm, and close, ad such as have the pickle highly flavoured : those that are fost, abby, and half-open, are of little value.

Olives.

OLIVES are the fruits of trees, which grow wild in the carmer parts of Europe: we have them in fome of our gardens; ut with us they will not ripen to any perfection.

There are three kinds, the Italian, Spanish, and French: we ave them therefore of various fizes and flavours: fome prefer ne, and fome the other.

The fine falad oil, as has been before mentioned, is made om this fruit, for which purpole they are gathered ripe; but or pickling they are gathered when half-ripe, at the latter end of une: they are put into fresh water to foak for two days; after is they throw them into lime-water, in which fome pearl-afhes ave been diffolved : they lie in this liquor fix-and-thirty hours; en they are thrown into water which has had bay-falt diffolved it: this is the last preparation, and they are fent over to us in is liquor: they are naturally as they grow on the tree very tter, and therefore require all these preparations to bring them their fine flavour. To fome olives they add, a fmall quantity f effence of fpices, which is an oil drawn from cloves, nutmeg, nnamon, coriander, and fweet fennel-feed distilled together for at purpose : twelve drops are enough for a bushel of olives : me prefer them flavoured with this effence, but others like them eft plain.

To pickle Capficum Pods.

GATHER the pods, with the ftalks on, before they turn red: it a flit down the fide with a pen-knife, and take out all the c ls, but as little of the meat as poffible; lay them in a ftrong ine for three days, changing it every day; then take them out, y them on a cloth, and lay another over them till they are quite y: boil vinegar enough to cover them, put into it fome mace id nutmeg beat fmall: put the pods into a glafs or jar, and hen the liquor is cold, pour it over, then tie a bladder and leaer over them.

To pickle Purslain Stalks.

WASH the ftalks, and cut them in pieces fix inches long; put them into water and falt, and let them boil up about a dozen times; then ftrain the liquor from them: make a pickle of ftale beer, white-wine vinegar, and falt: when they are cold put them in, and cover them close.

To pickle Fennel.

TAKE fome fpring-water, and when it boils put in the femnel tied in bunches, with fome falt; do not let it boil, but when it is of a fine green dry it on a cloth; when it is cold put it in a glafs, with fome nutmeg and mace, fill it with cold vinegar, and put a bit of green fennel at top; cover it, as other pickles, with a bladder and leather.

PIES.

Crust for raised Pics.

PUT four pounds of butter into a kettle of water, with three quarters of a pound of rendered beef fuet; boil it two or three minutes, pour it on twelve pounds of flour, work this into a pretty fliff paile, pull it into lumps to cool: raife the pie. Ufe the fame proportions for all raifed pies, according to the fize that is wanted, and bake them in a hot oven.

Puff Paste.

•RUB as much butter into fome flour as poffible, without its feeling at all greafy; it must be rubbed in quite fine; put water to make it a nice light passe, roll it out, stick bits of butter all over it, flour it, roll it up again; do this three times. This is proper for meat pies.

Short Gruft.

RUB fome butter and flour together, full fix ounces of butter to eight of flour; mix it up with as little water as poffible, fo as to have it a fliffifh pafle; beat it well, roll it thin. This is the beft cruft for all tarts that are to be eat cold, and for preferved fruit. A moderate oven. An ounce and a half of fifted fugar may be added.

Sugar Cruft.

HALF a pound of flour, half an ounce of fifted fugar; work this with a little cream, and about two ounces of butter, into a iff passe ; roll it very thin : when the tarts are made, tub the hite of an egg (first beaten) over them with a feather : tift igar. A moderate oven.

A Passe to be baked or fried.

TAKE flour according to the quantity of pafte which is to be ade, and mix it with fome powder-fugar, as much fugar as our; melt fome butter very fmooth, with fome grated lemonsel, and an egg well beat; mix up thefe ingredients till they are firm pafte: bake it, or fry it.

Beef Dripping clarified for Crust.

BOIL it in water a few minutes ; let it fland till cold ; it will one off in a cake : it makes good cruft for the kitchen.

Beef Steak Pie.

RUMP fteaks are the beft : feafon them with pepper and lt, most pepper; puff passe top and bottom : water to fill the sh.

Beef Olive Pie.

MAKE the olives as directed in the receipt for making beef ves: put them into puff paste top and bottom; fill the pic ith water: when baked pour in fome rich gravy.

A common Veal Pie.

AS the other two.

Arich Veal Pie.

CUT fleaks from a loin, a neck, a fillet, or a breaft; feafon em with pepper, falt, nutmeg, a very little pounded cloves; ce two fweetbreads, feafon them in the fame manner; lay puff fle round the difh half an inch thick, then the meat, yolks of gs boiled hard, and oyfters at the top; fill it with water; cover when it is taken out of the oven, pour in at the top, through funnel, fome good boiled gravy, thickened with a little cream d flour, and boiled up.

Veal Olive Pie.

MAKE the olives as directed in the receipt for making veal ives; put them into a cruft; fill the pie with water: when ked, pour in fome boiled gravy, thickened with a little cream id flour boiled together. It is a very good pie.

Calf's Head Pie.

CUT half a calf's head (first parboiled) into thin flices, feafon th pepper and falt; lay it into a crust, with a little good gravy, fome forcemeat-balls, and the yolks of eggs boiled hard; bake in about an hour and a half, then cut off the lid; thicken fome good gravy with a little flour; add fome oyfters: ferve it without a lid.

It may be ferved with the lid on.

A French Pie.

LAY a puff pafte half an inch thick at the bottom of a deep dith or a mould; lay forcemeat round the fides of the difh; cut fome fweetbreads in pieces, three or four, according to the fize the pie is intended to be; lay them in firft, then fome artichoke bottoms cut into four pieces each, then fome cockfcombs (or they may be omitted) a few truffles and morels, fome afparagus tops, and frefh mufhrooms, if to be had, yolks of eggs boiled hard; and forcemeat-balls; feafon with pepper and falt; almost fill the pie with water, cover it, bake it two hours: when it comes from the oven pour in fome rich veal gravy, thickened with a very little cream and flour.

theet of wafers, lay them on as broad as a fixpence, and as high as they can be laid; put them in a moderate oven half a quarter of an hour, and they will look as white as fnow.

To make Wafers.

TO a pint of cream put the yolks of two eggs well beat; mix it with flour well dried (as thick as a pudding) fugar and orangeflower water to the tafte; put in warm water enough to make it as thin as fine pancakes; mix them very fmooth, and bake them over a flove; butter the irons when they flick.

To clarify Sugar.

PUT four quarts of water into a preferving-pan, put into it the white of an egg, whifk it well with a whifk till it is a ftrong froth; put in twelve pounds of fugar, fet it over a ftove; when it boils put in a little cold water; let it boil up three or four times, and continue each time to put in a little cold water till the fcum rifes very thick; take it from the fire, let it fettle, then take off the fcum, run it through a wet napkin, and keep it for ufe.

If it is not fine when the four is taken off, it must be boiled again before it is strained.

To boil Sugar to the first Degree, called Smooth.

TAKE the clarified fugar and put it in a preferving-pan; when it boils dip in the fourmer; take fome of the fugar off the fourmer with a finger, put the finger to the thumb; when it is feparated from the thumb, if it draws out a fine thread, and remains in a drop on the finger, it is a little finooth; by boiling it more, it becomes quite fmooth.

The fecond Degree, called Blown Sugar.

FOR blown fugar it must boil longer, and must also be tried by dipping in the fourmer, and when it is taken out, by shaking off the fugar into the pan, blowing it with the mouth strongly through the holes; and if bubbles or bladders blow through it, it is boiled to the degree called blown.

The third Degree, called Feathered Sugar;

WHICH is to be proved by dipping in the fcummer; when it has boiled longer, fhake it over the pan, then give it a fudden jerk; if it is enough, the fugar will fly off like feathers.

The fourth Degree of boiling, called Crackled Sugar; WHICH muft boil ftill longer; it muft be proved by dipping a flick into the fugar, and then into cold water, which fhould ftand near for that purpofe : draw off the fugar from the flick ; if it is hard, and fnaps in the water, it is enough, if not it must boil till it will.

The water must be very cold, or it will not do.

The fifth Degree, or what is called Carmel Sugar.

IT must boil still longer, and is proved by dipping a stick first in the fugar, and then in the water; when it is boiled to the carmel, it will snap like glass the moment the stick touches the cold water. This is the highest degree of boiling sugar: the fire must not be very fierce at this last boiling, for sear the sugar sticuld burn and be discoloured.

To preferve Green Almonds.

TAKE the almonds when they are well grown, and make a lye with wood, charcoal, and water ; boil the lye till it feels very fmooth, strain it through a sieve, and let it settle till clear; then pour off the clear into another pan, and fet it on the fire, in order to blanch off the down that is on the almonds, which must be done in this manner: When the lye is fealding hot, throw in two or three almonds, and try, when they have been in fome time, if they will blanch; if they will, put in the reft, and the moment their skins will come off, remove them from the fire; put them into cold water and blanch them, rubbing them with falt; then wash them in several waters till the last appears clean; then throw them into boiling water, and let them boil till a pin may pass through them with ease; drain and put them into clarified fugar without water, they being green enough do not require a thin fugar to bring them to a colour; but, on the contrary, if too much heated, they will turn to too dark a green; the next day boil the fyrup and put it upon them; the day after, boil it till it is very fmooth; the day following give all a boil together, foum them, and let them lie four or five days; if they are to be dried put them into jellies, and follow the directions for green apricots.

If for a compote, it is but ferving them to table when they are first entered, by boiling the fugar a little more.

Almond Loaves.

Directions for Brewing.

THE process of brewing is as follows :- After the malt is ground, it ought to stand four or five days, and care should be taken it is very clean. The ingredients being ready, the water must be made to boil very speedily; and while boiling with the greatest violence, the fire must be immediately damped or put out; when the height of the steam is over, the water is put into the mathing-tub to wet the malt; then fo much being poured out as to make it of a confistence fliff enough to be mashed; let it fland thus a quarter of an hour covered over, after which another quantity of the water is added, and mashed, as before; let it fland, and then add the whole quantity of water, as the liquor is intended to be ftrong or weak; math it well, cover it, and let it ftand for two or three hours, more or lefs, according to the firength of the wort, or difference of the weather; then let it run into the receiver; and math again for the fecond wort, in the fame manner as for the first, only the water must be cooler, and it must not stand above half the time. The two worts being mixed together, the quantity of hops that is defigned may be added, and the liquor put into the copper, which being clofely covered up, let it boil gently for the fpace of an hour or two; then let the liquor into the receiver, and the hops strained from it into the coolers. When cool, the barm or yeaft is applied, which done, it is left to work or ferment till it is fit to tun up.

For finall beer, there must be a third mashing; the water must be near cold, and not stand above three quarters of an hour; to be hopp d and bound at differentiation. For double ale or beer, the two liquors coming from the two first mashings must be used as liquor for a third mathing of fresh malt. For fine ale, the liquor thus brewed is farther prepared with molaffes inftead of yeaft or barm; fome ufe Caftile foap, others an effential oil of barley, others a quinteffence of malt, others of wine; and others the fal panariftus.

For middling ale, a quarter of malt will make an hogfhead, and one of fmall beer; 'or it will make three hogfheads of good fmall beer, allowing eight pounds of hops; this will keep all the year; or it will make twenty gallons of ftrong ale, and two hogfheads of fmall beer that will keep all the year.

If the ale is to keep a great while, allow a pound of hops to every bushel of malt; if to keep fix months, five pounds to a hogshead, and the softest and clearest water that can be got.

For firong October, five quarters of malt to three hogfheads, and twenty-four pounds of hops; this will afterwards make two hogfheads of good keeping finall beer; allowing five pounds of hops to it.

In managing the veffels for the prefervation of beer, they muft not be at one time fealded and at another washed with cold water: fome rub them with hop-leaves that come from the wort, and then rinfe them again; then being dried in the air and headed, they take a long piece of canvass, and dipping it in brimstone, make fome matches of it, adding a few coriander feeds, and fet it on fire; fome open the bung and let the match burn in the veffel, keeping in as much as possible of the fulphureous fume by laying the bung lightly on; and when the match is burnt, stop all close for a little time; and when opened, the cask will be very fweet.

To make Raspberry Brandy.

TAKE two quarts of brandy and a pint of water, put it in a mug large enough to hold that and four pints of rafpberries; put in half a pound of loaf-fugar, and let it remain for a week, clofe covered; then take a piece of flannel with a piece of Holland over it, and let it run through by degrees—it may be racked into bottles a week after, and then it will be fuperfine.

Lemon Brandy.

TO one gallon of brandy put five quarts of water, two dozen of lemons, two pounds of the beft fugar, and three pints of milk; pare the lemons very thin, and lay the peel to fleep in the brandy twelve hours; fqueeze the lemons upon the fugar, then put the water to it, and mix all the ingredients together; boil the milk, and pour it in boiling hot; let it ftand twenty-four hours, then ftrain it through.

Orange Brandy.

PUT the chips of eighteen Seville oranges into three quarts of brandy, and let them steep a forthight in a stone bottle close stopped: boil two quarts of spring-water with a pound and a half of the finest sugar, near an hour, very gently; clarify the water and sugar with the white of an egg, then strain it through a jelly-bag, and boil it near half away; and when cold strain the brandy into the syrup.

Lemon or Orange Brandy.

TAKE the peels of fix lemons or oranges, fleep them in one quart of brandy; add to it one pint of water, with two ounces of double-refined fugar; it must be diffolved in the water; then strain it through a muslim or flannel, and bottle it for use.

To boil up Lemon or Orange Juice.

TO a pint of orange-juice, half a pound of fugar; to a pint of lemon-juice, a pound of fugar; let it fimmer over the fire, and foum it well; bottle it, and put a little brandy over it.

Birch Wine with Raifins.

TO an hogfhead of birch-water, take four hundred of Malaga raifins, pick them clean from the ftalks, and cut them fmall, then boil them in the birch-liquor an hour at leaft; fcum it well, and let it ftand till it is as warm as cow's milk; then put in the raifins, and let it ftand clofe covered, ftirring it well four or five times every day; boil all the ftalks in a gallon or two of birchliquor, which, added to the other when almoft cold, gives it an agreeable roughnefs. Let it ftand ten flays, then put it in a cool cellar, and when it has done hiffing in the veffel, ftop it up clofe; let it ftand at leaft three quarters of a year before it is bottled.

To procure the Birch-Liquor,

IT fhould be taken in the month of March from the birchtree, while the fap is rifing, before the leaves fhoot out; holes must be bored in the body of the tree, and foffets put in, which are generally made of the branches of elder, the pith being taken out—the tree may be tapped in four or five places at a time, and by that means fave from many trees feveral gallons every day; the bottles in which it drops must be corked close, and relined or waxed, but it should be used as foon as possible.

Birch Wine with Sugar.

TO every gallon of birch-liquor put two pounds of good fugar :

let the liquor boil half an hour, and foum it well before the fugar is put in, for it muft boil no longer after the fugar is in than while fourmed; then put it through a hair-fieve into a tub, and when it is cold, pour it from the grounds, and put fome yeaft to it; a quart will work up twelve gallons; let it work twenty-four hours, till it bath a pretty good head; the veffel muft be entirely filled, and muft be very tweet and ftrong, and fmoaked with brimflotte before the wine is put in--when it has done working, flop it up very clofe. Let it fland in a cool cellar three quarters of a year before bottling.

Mead Wine, an excellent Receifit, from a Lady.

TO one hundred and twenty gallons of pure water (the fofter the better) I put fifteen gallons of clarified honey; when the honey is well mixed with the water, I fill my copper (the fame I use for brewing) which holds only fixty gallons, and boil it, till it is reduced about a fourth part; I then draw it off, and boil the remainder of the liquor in the fame manner. When the last is about a fourth part wafted, I fill up the copper with fome of that which was first boiled; and continue boiling it and filling it up, till the copper contains the whole of the liquor; by which time it will of courfe be half evaporated. I must observe, that, in boiling, I never take off the fcum; but, on the contrary, have it well mixed with the liquor whilft boiling, by means of a jet; when this is done, I draw it off into under-backs, by a cock. at the bottom of the copper, where I let it remain till it is only as warm as new milk. At this time I turn it up, and fuffer it to ferment in the veffel, where it will form a thick head. As foon as it has done working, I ftop it down very close, in order to keep the air from it as much as poffible. I keep this, as well as all my mead, in a cellar or vault I have for the purpose, being very deep and cool; and the door fhuts fo clofe, as to keep out, in a manner, all the outward air; fo that the liquor is always in the fame temperature, being not at all affected by change of weather; and to this Dattribute, in a great measure, the goodness of my mead. Another proportion I have of making mead, is to allow eighty pounds of purified honey to one hundred and twenty gallons of foft water, which I manage in the making, in all respects, like that first above mentioned; and it proves very pleafant, good, light drinking, and is by many preferred to the other, which is much richer, and has a fuller flavour; but at the fame time it, is more inebriating, and apt to make the head ach, if drank in too large quantities; therefore, upon the whole, I imagine the laft to be the proportion that makes the wholefomeft liquor for common drink; the other being rather, when properly preferved, a rich cordial, fomething like fine old Malaga, which, when in perfection, is effected the beft of the Spanish wines. chufe, in general, to have this liquor pure and genuine, though nany love it best when it has an aromatic flavour-fuch mix elder, rolemary, and marjoram flowers with it; and use cinnamon, cloves, ginger, pepper, and cardamoms, in various proportions, according to their tafte. Others put in a mixture of thyme, eglantine, marjoram, and rofemary, with various fpices; but I do not approve this last practice at all, as green herbs are apt to make mead drink flat; and too many cloves, befides influencing it greatly in the tafte, make it high-coloured.—I never bottle my mead before it is half a year old; and when I do, I take care to have it well corked, and keep it in the fame vault wherein it flood whilft in the cafk.

Another Way to make Mead.

TO five quarts of honey put fixty quarts of water, eighteen races of fliced ginger, and one handful of rofemary; let them boil three hours, and continue fcumming while they boil; when it is cold put in the yeaft, and it will be fit to bottle in eight or ten days.

To make small Mead.

TO a gallon of water, two pounds of honey, one pound of fugar; boil it an hour, put in the whites of three or four eggs to raife the fcum; fcum it clean while boiling, then turn it into a clean tub, and let it fland a week, but at the fame time put in a toaft with honey to make it work; then turn it, and put in the peels of three or four lemons; let it fland a month, and if it is not fine, add fome more honey to it, and let it fland longer.

Clary Wine.

TO ten gallons of water, a quarter of a hundred of fugar, and the whites of thirteen eggs, beat and put into the water cold; then boil the water and fugar two hours, fcum it all the while, let it ftand till it is cold; put it in the veffel upon the clary, ftir it three or four times when it has done working, then flop it clofe: in fix months it will be fit to draw.

Cowflip Wine.

TO fix gallons of water put thirty pounds of Malaga raifins; boil the water full two hours, and then meafure it out of the copper upon the raifins, which must be chopped finall, and put into a tub; let them work together ten days, ftirring it feveral times a day; then ftrain it off, and prefs the raifins hard, to get out their ftrength; then take two fpoonfuls of good ale yeaft, beat up with it fix ounces of fyrup of lemons, put in three pecks of cowflips by degrees; let all the ingredients work together three days, ftirring it three or four times a day, then tun it up; bottle it at four months end.

To make Currant Wine.

GATHER your currants when full ripe, fqueeze them, and prefs out all the juice through an hair-fieve; throw the ftalks into cold water, ftrain them out alfo through an hair-fieve; to every gallon of juice put two gallons of water; and to every gallon of liquor, when mixed, put three pounds and a half of the beft Lifbon fugar; put it in a tub, and let it ftand two or three days, ftirring it twice a day; then put it into a cafk, and let it ftand ten or twelve months—you muft not ftop it up until it hath done finging: when you draw it off, bottle all that is fine; and let the thick run through a flannel bag, and put it into the cafk again with a little fugar, juft to keep it from fpoiling, and let it ftand until it is fine. When you firft put your wine into your cafk, before it has done working, you muft lay a piece of paper over the bung; and when it hath done working, ftop it up clofe.

That which is racked off through the flannel must be stopped up directly, when put into the cask.

N.B. A pint of brandy may be put in when it is working (that is, in a flate of fermentation) and another pint when the fermentation is flopped: the above quantity of brandy to about twenty gallons of wine.

Another Way to make Currant Wine.

TAKE five quarts of the juice of currants; fourteen pounds of fugar will make a five-gallon cafk; fill it up.with water, and let it all work together; when it has done working, put in a quart of brandy, and a hop or two.

Orange. Wine.

TO every fix gallons of fpring-water, one ftone of the beft powder fugar, and the whites of five eggs beat up to a froth; let it boil near two hours flowly; when it is quite cold, add the juice of fifty Seville oranges, fo thin pared that none of the white remains; add five fpoonfuls of barm, beat up with as much fyrup of citron, or of oranges; let it ftand two days and two nights; when it is tunned, add to it two bottles of mountain wine; tun up the rinds and all together. Let it ftand fix months or more; if it is not fine in that time, it must be fined, and must be looked at onec a week: as it fometimes works in the veffel, it must have air by a vent.

400

Vino Pontificalo.

STEEP the zeft rinds of fix oranges and fix lemons twentyfour hours in a gallon of good brandy, clofe ftopped; boil one pound and a half of loaf-fugar in two gallons of water a quarter of an hour, and clarify it with the whites of ten eggs, when it is cold add the juice of twenty-four oranges and five lemons to the gallon of brandy; then mix it all together, and ftrain off the rinds: put the liquor into a eask well stopped; after fix weeks draw it off into bottles, it will then be fit for use, but grows better for keeping.

Raifin Wine.

THREE hundred and a half of Malaga raifins, fixty-fix gallons of water, in a large tub with a falfe bottom; let them ftand for twenty-two or twenty-three days, flirring them once or twice a day; then draw them off into a clean hogfhead, and let them work as long as they will, filling the hogfhead full every day for five or fix months; then rack the liquor into another cafk, and put to it two gallons of brandy.

Red Raifin Wine.

TO every gallon of water boiled, and cold, put five pounds of velvedores; let it ftand fourteen days, flirring it twice a day, then prefs it off; if there is no prefs, it must be ftrained through a cloth; work in it a toast fpread with yeast, for two days, and then put it into a cask—it must not be stopped till it has done working; when it is fine, bottle it off. The raisins must be chopped before they are stoked.

Goolcberry Wine.

TO every three pounds of ripe goofeberries, put a pint of fpring-water unboiled; first bruife the fruit with the hands in a t ib, and then put the water to them; fiir them very well, and let them fiand a day, then firain them out; and to every three pounds of goofeberries and pint of water, put a pound of fugar; flir it till the fugar is diffolved, and let it ftand twenty-four hours more, then found the top clear off; put the liquor in a veffel, and the four into a flannel bag, and what runs from it, put into the veffel; it must work two or three days, and then be stopped close. Let it stand four months before it is bottled; and if it is not clear, let it stand in the bottles for some time, and then rack it off into other bottles—when it is drawn out of the cask it must not be tapped too low.

Grape Wine.

TO a gallon of grapes put a gallon of water; bruife the grapes, let them fland a week without flirring, then draw it off fine; put to a gallon of the wine three pounds of fugar, and then put it in a veffel, but do not flop it till it has done hiffing.

Elder Wine.

TAKE fixteen pounds of Malaga raifins, pick and chop them very fmall; take fix pounds of powder fugar, and five gallons of water; boil them all'together a quarter of an hour, then pour the liquor boiling hot upon the raifins: ftir them well together, and let them fland ten days, ftirring it well every day; then ftrain the liquor, and prefs out the raifins; add to each gallon a pint of the pure juice of elder-berries; put to it a very little aleyeaft fpread on a bit of toaft, juft enough to make it move, not to work up; let it fland two or three days to ferment, then tun it up into a veffel, but let it not be full, that there may be room for it to work; ftop it clofe, let it fland to be thoroughly fine, and then bottle it.

Another very excellent Receipt for Elder Wine.

TAKE Malaga raifins, cut them fmall, the ftalks, ftones, &c. and put them all together into a tub; pour over them water that has boiled an hour; to every fix pounds of raifins put one gallon of water, pour it on boiling hot, and ftir it well; when it is cold, cover it with a cloth, and let it work ten or twelve days, ftirring it five or fix times a day: then ftrain the liquor from the raifins, and fqueeze them hard: and put to every gallon of liquor one pint of clear juice of elder:—the beft way to get the juice, is to bake the berries in earthen pots—let the liquors be cold when they are put together, and ftir them well; then tun it up, and when it has done working clay it up; let it ftand four or five months before it is bottled; in fix weeks after it will be fit to drink; the elder-berries muft be very ripe.

Cherry Wine.

TAKE fifty pounds of black cherries picked from the ftalks, but the ftones remaining, let them be well bruifed with the hands;

then take half a bufhel of very ripe currants, and get as much juice from them as poffible, and likewife four quarts of rafpberries fqueezed in the fame manner; to this quantity of fruit, allow forty pounds of fugar, diffolve it in foft water, and when the fugar is melted, put it into a veffel with the bruifed cherries, the juice of currants, and rafpberries, then fill the veffel with foft water, only leaving room for the working; and when all is in the veffel, flir it well together with a flick, it muft not be bunged up under three weeks; it may be bottled in five months.

Laurel-Leaves, Hemlock, Mushrooms, Copper-Vessels, Earthen-Jars, &c. &c.

WITH OFSERVATIONS ON THE ADULTERATION OF BREAD AND FLOUR.

AND THE NATURE AND PROPERTIES OF WATER.

ON KITCHEN-POISONS.

1. The Lauro-Cerasus, or Common Laurel.

THE water distilled from the leaves of this tree has been frequently mixed with brandy, and other spirituous liquors, in order to give them the flavour of ratifia; and the leaves are often used in cookery, to communicate the same kind of taste to creams, custards, puddings, and some sorts of sweetmeats. But in the year 1728, an account of two women dying suddenly in Dublin, after drinking some of the common distilled laurel-water, gave rise to several experiments, made upon dogs, with the distilled water, and with the infusion of the leaves of the lauro-cerasus, communicated by Dr. Madden, physician at Dublin, to the Royal Society in England, and afterwards repeated (in the year 1731,) and confirmed by Dr. Mortimer, F.R.S. by which it appeared, that both the water and the infusion brought on convulsions, palsy, and death.

The laurus of the antients, or the bay, is, on the contrary, of a salutary nature, and of use in several disorders.

The lauro-cerasus is a plant of a very deleterious kind, and, in a large quantity, most formidably poisonous; yet, when administered with proper caution, and in small proportion, the leaves of the plant are generally thought not otherwise than innocent; and therefore, for kitchen purposes, as the flavouring of custards, &c. the use, in guarded and common moderation, may be continued in perfect safety. The bitter parts of the plant, in which also the noxious properties are supposed to reside, are determined to be the same in quality, and not sensibly different in degree, from the bitter almond, and the kernels of any of the stoned fruits; and in Holland, Linnæus mentions, that an infusion of this kind of laurel is used in the practice of the healing art. Miller also says, that laurel-leaves are perfectly innocent; a nice attention is however certainly necessary in the use of them.

The remedy against the poisonous laurel is from ten to forty drops of sal ammoniac, in a glass of water, repeated as the symptoms may require.

2. Small Hemlock, or Fool's Parsley. DESCRIPTION.

THE first leaves are divided into numerous small parts, which are of a pale green, oval, pointed, and deeply indented. The stalk is slender, round, upright, striated, and about a yard high. The flowers are white, growing at the tops of the branches in little umbels. It is an annual plant, common in orchards and kitchen gardens, and flowers in June and July. This plant has been often mistaken for parsley? and from thence it has received the name of Fool's Parsley.

Though it seems not to be of so virulent a nature as the larger hemlock, yet Boerhaave places it among the vegetable poisons in his Institutes; and, in his History of plants, produces an instance of its pernicious effects. It is therefore necessary to guard against it in collecting herbs for salads, and other purposes.

3. Mushrooms.

MUSHROOMS have been long used in sauces, in ketchup, and other forms of cookery. They were highly esteemed by the Romans, as they are at present by the French, Italians, and other nations.

Pliny exclaims against the luxury of his countrymen in this article; and wonders what extraordinary pleasure there can be in eating such dangerous food. The ancient writers on the Materia Medica seem to agree, that mushrooms are in general unwholesome; and the moderns, Lemery, 'Allen, Geoffroy, Boerhaave, Linnæus, and others, concur in the same opinion. There are numerous instances upon record of their fatal effects. Almost all of them, as the lastmentioned author affirms, " are fraught with poison."

The common esculent kinds, if eaten too freely, frequently bring on heart-burns, sicknesses, vomitings, diarrhœas, dysenteries, and other dangerous symptoms. It is therefore to be wished, that they were banished from the table. But if the palate must be indulged in these treacherous gratifications, or, as Seneca calls them, this "voluptuous poison," it is necessary that they who are employed in collecting them should be extremely cautious, lest they should collect such as are absolutely pernicions; which, considering to whose care this is generally committed, may, and undoubtedly has, frequently happened.

The eatable mushrooms at first appear of a roundish form, like a button; the upper part and the stalk are very white: the under part is of a livid flesh-colour; but the fleshy part, when broken, is very white. When these are suffered to remain undisturbed, they will grow to a large size, and expand themselves almost to a naturess, and the red part underneath will change to a dark colour.

Copper Vessels.

COPFER, when it is handled, yields an offensive smell, and if touched with the tongue, a sharp pungent taste, and even excites a nausea. Verdigris is nothing but a solution of this metal by vegetable acids. And it is well known, that a very small quantity of this solution will produce cholics, vomitings, intolerable thirst, universal convulsions, and other dangerous symptoms. If these effects, and the prodigious divisibility of this metal be considered, there can be no doubt of its being a violent and subtile poison : we are daily exposed to this poison by the use of copper vessels for dressing our food. The very air of the kitchen, abounding with oleaginous and saline particles, penetrates and disposes them to dissolution before they are used. Water by standing some time in a copper vessel, is impregnated with verdigris, as may be demonstrated by throwing into it a small quantity of any volatile alkali, which will immediately tinge it with a paler or deeper blue, in proportion to the rust contained in the water. Vinegar, apple-sauce, greens, oil, grease, butter, and almost every kind of food, will extract the verdigris in a greater degree. It is true, people imagine that the ill effects of copper are prevented by its being tinned; but the tin, which adheres to the copper, is so extremely thin, that it is soon penetrated by the verdigris, which insinuates itself through the pores of the metal, and appears green upon the surface.

Verdigris is one of the most violent poisons in nature : yet, rather than quit an old custom, the greater part of mankind are content to swallow some of this poison every day.

Our food receives this quantity of poison in the kitchen, by the use of copper pans and dishes. The brewer mingles poison in our beer by boiling it in a copper. Salt is distributed to the people from copper scales, covered with verdigris. Pickled cucumbers are rendered green by an infusion of copper coin. The pastrycook bakes our tarts in copper patty-pans. But confections and syrups have greater powers of destruction: for they are set over a fire in copper vessels, which have not been tinned; and the verdigris is plentifully extracted by the acidity of the composition.— And though we do not, after all, swallow death in a single dose, yet it is certain that a quantity of poison, however small, which is repeated with every meal, must produce more fatal effects than is generally believed.

Bell-metal kettles are very often used in boiling cucumbers for pickling, in order to make them green. This is an absurd and dangerous practice. If the cucumbers acquire any additional greenness by the use of these kettles, they can only derive it from the copper of which they are made.

According to some writers, bell-metal is a composition of tin and copper, or pewter and copper, in the proportion of twenty pounds of pewter, or twenty-three pounds of tin, to one hundred weight of copper. According to others, this metal is made of copper, a thousand pounds; tin, from two or three hundred pounds; and brass, one hundred and fifty pounds.

Spoons and other kitchen utensils are frequently made of a mixed metal, called alchemy; or, as it is vulgarly pronounced, ockimy. The rust of this metal, as well as the former, is highly pernicious.

The author of a tract, entitled, "Serious Reflections on the Dangers attending the Use of Copper Vessels," published at London in 1755, asserts, that, "the greater frequency of palsies, apoplexies, madness, and all the frightful train of nervous disorders which suddenly attack us, without our being able to account for the cause, or which gradually weaken our vital faculties, are the poisonous effects of this pernicious matter, taken into the body insensibly with our victuals, and thereby intermixed with our blood and juices."

However this may be, it is certain that there have been innumerable instances of the pernicious consequences of ealing food dressed in copper vessels, not sufficiently cleaned from the rust. On this account the Senate of Sweden, about the year 1753, prohibited copper vessels, and ordered that none but such as were made of iron should be used in their fleets and armies.

But if copper vessels are still continued, every cook and good house-wife should be particularly careful in keeping them clean and well-tinned : and should suffer nothing to remain in them longer than is absolutely necessary for the purpose of cookery.

REMEDY.

"The common cure," says Dr. Mead, " of all poisons taken into the stomach, must be by throwing them up again, by vomiting as soon as possible, and defending the membranes from their pungent acrimony. Drinking very large quantities of warm milk, with oil of sweet almonds, till the vomiting ceases, will answer the first intention. The other, in mineral poisons, (for the effects of vegetable poisons, after they have been vomited up, generally go off by diluting plentifully with soft and fat liquids) require particular care, which may be in this way. The force of these depends upon a combination of metallic particles with saline crystals: therefore the disuniting of these must destroy their power. This may be done by drinking a quantity of lixivium made by a solution of salt of tartar in water : for this salt, uniting with the corrosive crystalline salt, will, after some degree of effervescence, kill it, as the chemists speak; by which means, being disengaged from the mineral globules, it will be rendered of no effect."

THE LADY'S ASSISTANT.

The Solution or Salt of Lead.

LEAD is a metal easily corroded, especially by the warm steams of acids, such as vinegar, cyder, lemon-juice, rhenish-wine, &c. And this solution, or salt of lead, is a slow and insiduous, though certain poison. The glazing of all our common brown pottery ware is either lead or lead ore. If black, it is lead ore, with a small proportion of manganese, which is a species of iron ore. If yellow, the glazing is lead ore, and appears yellowish by having some pipe or white clay under it. The colour of the common pottery ware is red, as the vessels are made of the same clay with common bricks. These vessels are so porous, that they are penetrated by all salts, acid or alkaline, and are unfit for retaining any saline substance. They are improper, though too often used, for preserving sour fruits or pickles. The glazing of such vessels is corroded by the vinegar; for, upon evaporating the liquor, a quantity of the salt of lead will be found at the bottom. A sure way of judging whether the vinegar, or other acids, have dissolved part of the glazing, is, by their becoming vapid, or losing their sharpness, and acquiring a sweetish taste by standing in them for some time: in which case the contents are to be thrown away as pernicious.

The substance of the pottery ware commonly called Delft, the best being made at Delft in Holland, is a whitish clay when baked, and soft, as not having endured a great heat in baking. The glazing is a composition of calcined lead, calcined tin, sand, some coarse alkaline salt, and sandiver; which being run into a white glass, the white colour being owing to the tin, is afterwards ground in a mill, then mixed with water, and the vessels, after being baked in the furnace, are dipped into it, and put into the furnace a second time; by which means, with a small degree of heat, the white glass runs upon the vessels. This glazing is exceedingly soft, and easily cracks. What effects acids will have upon it, the author of these observations cannot say, not having tried them; but they seem to be improper for inspissating the juice of lemons, oranges, or any other acid fruits.

The most proper vessels for these purposes are porcelain of china ware. The substance of them is of so close a texture, that no saline, or other liquor, can penetrate them. The glazing, which is made likewise of the substance of the china, is so firm and close, that no salt or saline substance can have the least effect upon it. It must however, be observed, that this remark is only applicable to the porcelain made in China: for some species of the European manufactory are certainly glazed with a fine glass of lead, &c.

Next to China is the stone ware, commonly called the Staffordshire ware, The substance of these vessels is a composition of black flint, and a strong clay, that bakes white. Their outsides are glazed by throwing into the furnace, when well heated, common or sea salt, decrepitated; the steam or acid of which, flying up among the vessels, vitrifies the outsides of them, and gives them the glazing. This stone ware does not appear to be injured or effected by any kind of salts, either acid or alkaline, or any liquors, hot or cold.— They are therefore extremely proper for all common uses; but require a careful management, as they are much apter to crack with any sudden heat, than china.

REMARKS ON THE ADULTERATION OF BREAD AND FLOUR.

IN the sophistication of flour, mealmen and bakers have been known to use bean-meal, chalk, whiting, slaked lime, alum, and even ashes of bones. The first, bean-flour, is perfectly innocent, and affords a nourishment equal to that of wheat; but there is a toughness in bean-flour, and its colour is dusky. To remove these defects, chalk is added to whiten it, alum to give the whole compound that consistence which is necessary to make it knead well in the dough, and jalap to take off the astringency. It may be supposed, that these horrid iniquities are only imaginary, or at least exaggerated, and that such mixtures must be discoverable even by the most ordinary taste; but as some adulterations of this nature have certainly been practised, the following experiments may serve to gratify curiosity, or discover frauds, where any such exist.

"To discover whether flour be adulterated with whiting or chalk, mix with it some juice of lemon or good vinegar. If the flour be pure, they will remain together at rest; but if there be a mixture of whiting or chalk, a fermentation, like the working of yeast, will ensue. The adulterated meal is whiter and heavier than the good: the quantity that an ordinary tea-dish will contain has been found to weigh more than the same quantity of genuine flour, by four drachms and 19 grains Troy."

"The regular method to detect these frauds in bread is this :--Cut the crumb of a loaf into very thin slices; break them, but not into very small pieces, and put them into a glass cucurbit, with a large quantity of water. Set this, without shaking, in a sand furnace, and let it stand, with a moderate warmth, four-and-twenty hours. The crumb of the bread will in this time soften in all its parts, and the ingredients will separate from it. The alum will dissolve in the water, and may be extracted from it in the usual way. The jalap, if any have been used, will swim upon the top in a coarse film; and the other ingredients, being heavy, will sink to the bottom --This is the best and most regular method of finding the deceit: but as cucurbits, and sand furnaces, are not at hand in private families, there is a more familiar method.

THE LADY'S ASSISTANT.

Let the crumb of a loaf be sliced, as before directed, and put it, with a great deal of water, into a large earthen pipkin. Let this be set over a very gentle fire, and kept a long time moderately hot; and the pap being poured off, the bone ashes, or other ingredients, will be found at the bottom."

ON WATER.

😅 11. L

T is a long-established observation, that the best waters boil and cool again the soonest; and that they evaporate in the least time, and with the least degree of heat.

A well-known mark of the purity of water is its softness. This quality is discoverable by the touch, if we only wash our hands in it: and the distinction between hard and soft water generally rises from its difficult or easy union with oily substances.

Soft water is the most proper for the washing and bleaching of linen, the making of paper, and for most medicinal purposes. It mixes more uniformly with milk, and does not curdle it, as hard waters frequently do. It boils pease and beans softer, and mixes better with flour, rice, oatmeal, &c. In boiling meat, it gives it a more agreeable colour than hard water, which often boils it red.

There are however some purposes, to which hard water is more proper: as, in several killds of dying; in making starch; and in the rinsing of soap out of linen, after it has been washed; as it is observed to give the linen a better colour, and an agreeable firmness or crispness; but the linen thus treated requires more soap, when it comes to be washed again. Hard water gives a better colour to greens, and a firmness to all sorts of fish, especially cod, when boiled in it.

The Burton, Nottinghamshire, Liverpool, and several other kinds of ale, which are much admired, are said to be brewed with hard water. But Dr. Mead and others condemn the use of these liquors, as productive of various disorders, and particularly the cholic.

From these remarks we may reasonable infer, that hard water cannot so well answer the purposes of diluting and digesting our food; as it will not so readily mix and unite with the different parts of it, nor assimilate and digest them properly. Besides, the large quantities of acid and nitrous salts, with the loads of selenite and calcareous earth, which these waters generally contain, will naturally dispose them to form obstructions, when, by the course of circulation, these solid particles come into the minutest vessels, more especially those of the glands. Hence they are often blamed, as laying the foundation of scrophulous, strumous, and other glandular swellings and obstructions.

It is from the quantity of stony matter, which the hard waters generally contain, that most of them leave large incrustations upon the side; of the vessels in which they are boiled; and they have by some been disapproved for this treason, as causing the stope. But the calculous concretions in the bladder and kidneys are of a very different nature from these incrustations; and, as Dr. Heberden justly observes, of they totally differ from all fossil stones in every thing except the name: and the pretended experience of the effects of certain stony waters in breeding the stone, may, upon the best authorities, be rejected as false.

The best way of determining the hardness or softness of water, is by scraping any certain quantity of soap into it, and observing how it dissolves or lathers. If water be perfectly soft, the soap will dissolve quickly, uniformly, and without, curdling; and, upon shaking the glass briskly, will rise a strong froth or lather at the top. But the smallest degree of hardness will show 'itself, either by the soap not dissolving so readily, by its turning curdly and uneven, or by less froth remaining after it is agitated; and the different degrees of hardness may hereby be very well determined. The best way of making this trial is with a small quantity of Castile soap, viz. about a grain to an ounce of water.

A Rain-water.

In summer-time rain-water brings along with it the seeds and embryos of vegetables and animalcula, which render it disagreeable to the taste, and promote its putrefaction. If it be kept in wooden vessels, it will soon stink, and become unit for use, and then, if it be viewed with a microscope, it will be found to contain an amazing number of various animalcula; and particularly those which, from their form and motion, are called the wheel animals. These animalcula are supposed to be the chief cause of the water's putrefaction.

Rain-water is a little hard, when it first falls; but in two or three days it becomes perfectly soft. The rain, which falls through the smoke of large towns, is ren-

The rain, which falls through the smoke of large towns, is rendered foul and black; more especially if it be collected, as it generally is, from the roots of houses; when it brings with it a great many particles of soot, which give it a very disagreeable taste and colour. Where the tiles are blackened by the smoke of glass-houses, &c. the water which falls from them is unfit for almost any domestic purposes.

When rain-water subsides, and is well filtered, it becomes perfectly clear and bright. If it be kept in wooden vessels, it contracts a particular smell, taste, and colour from the wood.

Clean earthen jars are the best for keeping water. Though leaden cisterns may be used with safety, if they be kept clear from vegetable acids; all of which are found to corrode lead, and to produce a very noxious salt. The vessels in which water is preserved should be covered, to prevent any dust or filth from getting in; and the water will be more agreeable, if kept in a cool place.

Snow-water:

Some of the greatest philosophers and physicians have differed much in their opinion of snow-water. Hippocrates, floffman, and others, condemn it. But Boerhaave, on the other hand, is lavish in its encomiums. He asserts, that snow, which is collected from the tops of high sandy mountains, at a distance from any towns or houses, where it has fallen after a long sharp frost, in calm weather, and lies at a considerable height above the surface of the earth, produces water, " which is the purest of all, quite immutable, capable of being kept for many years, and is a singular remedy for inflammations of the eyes."

Dr. Rotheram having mentioned the efficacy of snow-water in burns, and in fertilizing the ground, relates the following experiment; which, though it may appear of a trivial nature, he very justly remarks, is not below the notice of the philosopher.

"One effect of snow, of which I do not remember any where to have read, is, that a certain quantity of it; taken up fresh from the ground, and mixed in a flour-pudding, will supply the place of eggs, and make it equally light. The quantity allotted is two table spoonfuls, instead of one egg; and if this proportion be much exceeded, the pudding will not adhere together, but will fall to pieces in boiling. I assert this from the experience of my own family; and any one, who chooses to try it, will find it to be a fact.

Spring-water.

AS all our springs are originally supplied by rain or melted snow, and hail, strained through the pores and cavities of the earth, their waters will vary according to the different soils, or strata; through which they pass. If waters meet with nothing in their subterraneous passages, which will unite with them, or dissolve in them, they issue out in their greatest purity. The springs, which come from gravel, sand, or some light and porous stones, are generally the purest and best : for the water, being filtered through their small pores, is cleared from almost every foreign substance or impurity which it had contracted in the air, acquires an agreeable coolness, and becomes limpid, bright, and sparkling.

But, as there are few soils, which do not contain some kinds of salt, or other mineral substances, which are soluble in water, most of our springs are found to partake, in some measure, of the nature of the soil through which they pass; and are innocent, salutary, or noxious, in proportion to the quantity, kind, or mixture, of the various ingredients of which they are composed, and the constitution of the person who uses them; and some of them are of great medicinal efficacy.

Stagnant-water.

Stagnant-water in ponds and ditches is generally esteemed the worst. But large lakes, which are kept in almost a continual agitation by the wind, do not properly come within the denomination of stagnant waters.

THE LADY'S ASSISTANT.

Pump-water, especially in London.

IT appears, from the analysis performed by Dr. Heberden, that several pump-waters in London, which he had examined, and probably most of them, contain powder of lime-stone, and the mineral acids of vitriol, nitre, and sea-salt, united in various proportions .--These waters are likewise tainted with an oiliness, which gives them a remarkable yellowish cast, when compared with pure distilled water. It is reasonable to think, that waters impregnated with such active substances, in a quantity sufficient to render them disagreeable to the taste, cannot always be drank with impunity. They have accordingly been suspected of occasioning pains in the stomach and bowels, glandular tumours, and costiveness, where the simple lime-stone prevails; and diarrheas, where much of it is united with the solution of acids; and it is probable, that a continued use of such waters may be the cause of many other disorders, especially to the infirm, and to children. From whence it follows, that a change of place may often be of as much use to weak persons, from the change of water as of air.

Some obscure notion of the unwholesomeness of pump-water, induces many persons to boil it, and let it stand to grow cold; by which it will indeed be made to part from most of its unneutralized lime-stone and selenite; but at the same time it will become more strongly impregnated with the saline matter, and therefore it will be worse.

If a small quantity of salt of tartar were added to the water, it would readily precipitate both the loose lime-stone, and likewise that which is united to the acids. Ten or fifteen grains would generally be enough for a pint; but the exact proportion would readily be found, by continuing to add to it, by little and little, till it ceased to occasion white clouds. This is an easy way, not only of freeing the water from its lime-stone, but also of changing the saline part into nitre and sal sylvii, both of which we know, by long experience, to be innocent.

But the best way of avoiding the bad effects of pump-water would be, not to make a constant use of it; and in a place so well supplied with river-water as London, there is very little necessity to drink of the springs; which, in so large a city, besides their natural contents, must collect many additional impurities from cellars, buryinggrounds, common-sewers, and many other offensive places, with which they undoubtedly often communicate; so that it is indeed a wonder, that we find this water at all tolerable.

Thames and New-River Water.

RIVER waters partake of the properties of their springs, and the channels through which they run; yet, in a wonderful manner, they soon free themselves from their impurities. The motion of the curtent, the absorption of the soil, the sun and rain, have each of them a considerable share in this effect. The most rapid rivers contain the purest waters.

The Thames-water, especially in the neighbourhood of London, is mixed with many impure ingredients. It is said to become offensive in seven or eight days, or sometimes sooner, if it be-kept in unseasoned casks. In this state it generates a quantity of foul inflammable air, as may be seen by holding the flame of a candle to the bung-hole of a cask, when it is first open. But by this fermentation it soon purifies itself; and by opening the bung, it will often become sweet in twenty-four hours, and sooner if it be poured from one vessel to another, or ventilated.

Methods by which Water may be obtained in its greatest Purity.

AS it appears, that almost all the water used in cookery is tainted with impure ingredients; rain-water, with a great variety of volatile bodies, fuliginous particles, exhalations, invisible seeds, and insects? river, pond, and well-water, with a mixture of soil and mud, decayed vegetables, and the spawn of vermin; it will be very proper to purify it, before it is used for drinking, or any kitchen purpose. This may be done by various contrivances.

1. The water of the Thames, and that of the New-River, are very often muddy, or taste strongly of weeds and leaves. Dr. Heberden acknowledges; that the latter fault cannot easily be remedied; but, he observes, they would soon be freed from their muddiness, if kept some time in an open jar: and he is of opinion, that if the water given to very young children were thus purified, it. might prevent some of their bowel-disorders', and so contribute a little to lessen that amazing mortality among the children 'which are nursed in London.

2. Rain-water, when grown putrid, may be easily rendered wholesome again, and may be drank without being offensive, by only boiling it a few moments: for by this expedient the animals that are in it will be destroyed, and, with the rest of the impurities, will subside to the bottom. If then you make it moderately acid, by adding to it a small quantity of acid that is very strong, it will be fit for nse. This is found to be of excellent service under the equator, and between the tropics, where the waters putrely in a horrible manner, and breed a multitude of insects, and yet must be drank. For the same reason, a small quantity of the spirit of vitriol, mixed with water, will prevent its growing putrid and breeding any animals, and, at the same time, preserve it wholesome and good.

3. A common way of purifying water is by filtration. Water, which is filtrated through porous stones, is extremely clear and limpid; but some writers have asserted, that it acquires a petrifying quality in its passage, which, at length, may produce disagreeable effects. However this may be, these stones are too dear for common use.

Dr. Rotheram asserts, that one of the readiest and best methods of filtrating water, is, to let it run through a bed of clean sand. This is, he says, preferable to the filtering-stone, as it performs its work much sooner; and the grains of sand are of so many different figures, that they are pretty sure to stop the progress of any bodies of sensible bulk in passing through them.

"A friend of mine," says the Doctor, "in this town [Newcastle] has a cistern for collecting rain-water so constructed, that it both allows the water to subside, and the upper part of it to run through a bed of sand, which is raised by a partition above the bottom of the cistern; by which means the water becomes perfectly clear and bright, and is preferred, by most who have tasted it, to any other water in this town."

4. Some have objected, but probably without reason, to this mode of filtration, on a presumption that the sand has the same effect on the water as the filtering-stone : for it is said, that the sand is insensibly dissolved by the water; so that in four or five years it will have lost a fifth part of its weight. M. Amy therefore recommends the filtration of water through a spunge, more or less compressed. And this, he assures us, will render it, not only more clear, but more wholesome, than either a stone or sand.

5. As the purest of all water is obtained by distillation, Dr. Heberden recommends this method, as particularly useful where fuel is cheap and the water is bad; as it is in some of our foreign settlements.

The first running of distilled water has a disagreeable musty taste: on this account, if the still hold twenty gallons, it will be necessary to throw away the first gallon. The rest, though free from this, mustiness, will have a disagreeable empyreumatic or burnt taste. This taste goes off by keeping about a month, by ventilation, in a few minutes, or by boiling the water in an open vessel. Distilled water must be kept in perfectly clean glass or stone bottles, with glass stoppers, or metal covers; and then, having in it no principle of corruption, it is incapable of being spoiled, and will keep just the same for ever. But the least particle of any animal or vegetable substance, will spoil a great quantity; and therefore the still and bottles should be kept wholly for this use.

This process, though certainly attended with many good effects, requires too much time and attention for common use; and therefore, in general, it may be sufficient to adopt the mode of filtration recommended by Dr. Rotheram, or that which is proposed by M. Amy.

These observations are not new, they have been communicated to the public by others. They are dispersed through many different publications. I have therefore thrown them into a small compass. And I flatter myself, that in a book of Cookery they may be acceptable to the public; as many of the foregoing articles are of infinite importance to the health, and consequently to the happiness, of mankind.

CONTAINING

GENERAL PARTICULARS

ON THE

BREEDING, REARING, AND MANAGEMENT OF POULTRY; ON THE BUSINESS OF THE DAIRY:

AND ON THE

MANAGEMENT OF THE KITCHEN AND FRUIT GARDEN:

T HOUGH the management of Poultry, the Dairy, and the Kitchen and Fruit Garden, is not the peculiar object of the cook, yet it is indispensably necessary to be known by every housekeeper, whom chance may sometimes destine to a rural life; in a situation remote from large towns, and from whence the different articles of poultry, fruit, and vegetables, cannot readily be procured. They may likewise afford an amusing and pleasing employment to many who retire from the busy scenes of populous towns and cities, to enjoy the calm pleasures of a rural retreat.—We shall therefore begin with The Breeding, Rearing, and Management of Poultry.

IN order to proceed properly in this business, our first consideration must be the choice of such fowls as are most proper for breeding. The middle-aged fowls are the most proper for sitting; but the younger sort should be chosen for laying. The usual proportion is six hens to a cock; and the fowls should always be fed at one particular hour, and at one place, in order to make them familiar to their own home.

The best age to set a hen is from two years old to five, and February is the best month; though any month before Michaelmas willanswer the purpose well enough. Ducks and turkies sit thirty days, but a hen sits only twenty.

It will be necessary, as nearly as possible, that the cocks and hens should be of the same breed, and that the hen should be vigilant and industrious for the preservation of herself and chickens. The hens, which should be in every respect proportioned to the cock, should be of the largest size; and those hens, which have upon their crowns a taft of feathers, are generally most liked. Have nothing to do with a hen that crows, as she is never either a good layer or breeder; nor will a hen, if she be fat, answer the end of laying or breeding: she will grow slothful and indolent, she will lay eggs without shells, and when set will forsake her nest. When a hen is about a year and a half, or two years, old she lays the best eggs; and at this time give them plenty of victuals, and sometimes oats, and they will repay your bounty with large eggs. Hens will sometimes eat their own eggs, which may be prevented by laying in their way, a piece of chalk cut like an egg. They will often be pecking at it, and, when they find themselves disappointed, they will not again attempt it. When the hen begins to cluck, it is a sign she is inclinable to sit. Do not disappoint her; but put no more than ten eggs under her. That a hen should always be set with an odd egg, as nine, eleven, or thirteen, is a vulgar notion, and founded only on caprice.

We have already observed, that February is the best month for setting a hen. This should be done just after the full moon, in order that she may produce her chickens in the increase of the next new moon. Though a hen may sit till October; yet the best broods are generally produced in February.

If ducks, geese, or turkies eggs are put under a hen, it must be done nine or ten days before you put her own eggs to her. It will be necessary to make some kind of mark on one side of the eggs, before you put them under the hen, and to take notice whether she turns them herself. If you find she does not, you must take the opportunity, when she is absent from her nest, to turn them yourself. Before you set your hen, be careful that the eggs are new, which you may know by their being heavy, full and clear. The largest eggs have sometimes two yolks, and consequently are good for nothing; therefore choose those of a moderate size.

If the hen be disturbed while she is sitting, she will probably forsake her nest, which must be prevented by putting her meat and water near her, which will likewise prevent her eggs cooling, as she will not have far to go in quest of food. Should you find her at any distance from the nest, take the opportunity to stir up the straw gently, in order to make it soft, but the eggs must be carefully laid in the same order they were before.

With respect to your hen-house, it should be large and spacious, the roof high, and the walls strong. The windows must be in the east side, in order to receive the advantage of the rising sun. Round about the inside of the walls, upon the ground, make large pens, three feet high, for geese, ducks, and large fowls to set in, and near the roof of the house long perches must be placed, reaching from one side to the other. At the darkest part of one side of the house, over the ground pens, several small handfuls of straw must be placed, which will serve the fowls for their nests, either to lay their eggs in, or to sit in to hatch their chickens, but when they are sitting to hatch chickens, their nests must be always on the ground. Pins must be stuck in different parts of the wall, in order to assist the fowls in getting up to their perches with more ease.

The hen-house floor must be made of earth quite smooth; but not paved ; and a hole must be made at one end for the smaller fowls to pass through at their pleasure, in order to prevent their seeking out other places to roost in. The larger fowls may be let in and out every night and morning at the door.

To keep your hen-house clean and free from vermin, is a matter essentially necessary to be attended to; and your perches must be so placed, that none of the fowls on the lower perches be directly under those above them. Various kinds of vermin will naturally breed where poultry is kept; but this may be in some degree prevented by sowing wormwood and rue about your hen-house. You may also boil wormwood, and sprinkle the floor with the liquor, which will answer two purposes, that of keeping your poultry in good health, and assisting in the destruction of vermin.

If any of your chickens, when hatched, be weaker than the rest; wrap them up in wool, or some flamel, and put them in a small basket near the fire. The first hatched chickens may be kept in a deepish sieve till the rest are disclosed, as they will not eat for two days. As some shells are harder than others, they will consequently require the more time for opening; but, if the chickens be not weak, nor the hen unkind, it will be better to let them continue under her, as she will nourish them better than any artificial heat possibly can.

After the chickens have been hatched two days, you may give them very small oatmeal, some dry, and some steeped in milk, or you may give them crumbs of white bread. As soon as they have gained strength, you may give them curds, cheese parings, white bread, crusts soaked in milk, or any other soft meat, that is small and easy of digestion. They must not be suffered to go abroad with the hen in less than a fortnight; and great care must be taken that their water be quite clean, as the pip is generally the consequence of their drinking dirty water.

When you wish to fatten your chickens, confine them in coops. and feed them with barley-meal. A very little brick-dust put into their water will give them an appetite to their meat, and hasten their fattening. All fowls have two stomachs: the one is their crop, which softens their food, and the other their gizzard, which macerates it. In the last are generally found small stones, and sharp bits of sand, which assist mastication, and without which, or something of that nature, a fowl would loose its appetite. The gizzard not being able to grind the food fast enough to discharge it from the crop without such assistance, it is of great service, for this purpose, to throw brick-dust into the water.

If your sitting hen be troubled with lice or other vermin, which will sometimes be the case, wash them with a decoction of wild lupines. The pip is a very common disorder in fowls, and arises from a white thin scale growing on the tip of the tongue, which is generally occasioned by their drinking puddle-water, want of clean water, or eating filthy food. However, pull off the scale with your nail, rub the tongue with some salt, and the complaint will be removed.

Ducks.

DUCKS generally begin to lay in the month of February, and if your gardener will be attentive to pick up snails, grubs, caterpillars, worms, and such like insects, and lay them in one place, it will make your ducks familiar, and furnish them with an agreeable change of food. Parsley sown about the ponds they frequent, will not only be agreeable to the ducks, but also give a pleasing flavour to their flesh. They must be accustomed to retire every night to one certain place; but let their nests be partitioned off from each other, and made as near the water as possible. Ducks being very apt to ramble, always feed them as near home as possible.

Their eggs must be every day removed, till they seem inclinable to sit, and then they may be left in the place where they have laid them. They require no great attention while they are sitting, provided you put near them some barley or offal corn and water, in order that they may not be obliged to straggle far from the nest, and thereby injure their eggs.

In winter time it is the best way to set a hen upon duck eggs; for ducks of every kind, as soon as their young ones are hatched, will lead them to the water, where, in cold weather, some of them will probably be lost. Twelve or thirteen eggs is the proper number to set under a duck. A hen willcover as many of these eggs as of her own, and bring up the young brood with an equal share of care and attention.

If the ducklings be hatched in tolerably moderate weather, they will require little attention; but, if they be hatched in a wet season, they must be taken under cover, and in particular during the night; for though water is the favourite element of a duck, it is easily hurt by the wet, till its feathers are grown, and it has acquired some strength by age.

Ducks of any age are fattened in the same manner. Put them into a retired place, in a pen, and let them have plenty of corn and water. You need not be difficult in the choice of what kind of grain you give them, so they have but plenty of it. With this treatment they will sufficiently fatten themselves in the course of a fortnight or three weeks.

Geese.

VERY little attendance or expense are required in the rearing of geese, as they will live upon commons, or any sort of pasture, where there is plenty of water. The largest geese are generally the most esteemed, and they should be either of a white or grey colour, as the pyed are not so profitable; and the least in esteem are those that are dark coloured.

Thirty days is generally the time for a goose to sit; but, should the weather bevery moderate and warm, she willhatch them three or four days sooner. Care must be taken not to let them want for food, such as shag oats and bran scalded; and it will be necessary, as soon as the goslings are hatched, to keep them ten or twelve days in the house, and feed them with curds, barley meal, bran, and such like food. Four or five geese are generally allowed to one gander.

If you wish to fatten green geese, you must shut them up when they are about a month old, and they will be fat in another month more. The more usual age of fattening geese is when they are about six months old, in or after harvest, when they have been in the stubble fields, from which food alone some people kill them. Those who are desirous of having them very fat, shut them up for a fortnight or three weeks, and feed them upon oats, split-beans, barleymeal, or ground malt, mixed with milk; but this sort of geese is generally too strong for weak and delicate stomachs.

. Turkies.

WHILE turkies are young, being of a very tender constitution, they must be kept warm, and carefully attended to. The hens are so inattentive to their young, that while a single one will follow them, they will pay no kind of attention to the rest. Turkies are great feeders on corn, and, if you give them their fill, they will devour a prodigious quantity; but, if you turn them out to shift for themselves when grown up, they will provide for themselves, by feeding on herbs, seeds, or whatever chance shall throw in their way.

They must be well watched, and compelled to lay their eggs at home; for they are great wanderers, and will often deposit their eggs in secret places. March is the month they generally begin to lay in, and sit in April; but you must not put under them more than twelve eggs.

When the turkies have hatched their brood, which is usually accomplished in twenty-five or thirty days, great care must be taken to keep the young ones warm, as the least cold will kill them. You must feed them either with curds, or green fresh cheese, cut in small pieces, and their drink must be new milk, or milk and water. They must be frequently fed, as the hen will not concern herself much about that matter; and when they have acquired some strength, they may be fed in the open air, in a close-walled place, from whence they cannot stray. The dew being very prejudicial to the health of turkies, you must take care not to let them out too early in the morning, nor leave them out late in the evening.

In order to fatten turkies, give them sodden barley or sodden oats for the first fortnight, and cramb them for another fortnight with the following. Sift a quantity of barley-meal, and mix it with new milk. Make it into a good stiff paste, and then make it into long crams or rolls, big in the middle, and small at both ends. Wet them in lukewarm milk, give the turkey a full gorge three times a day, and they will be sufficiently fattened in the course of a fortnight.

Pigeons.

THE best months to provide yourself with pigeons are May and August, as they are young and in good condition at those seasons; Tame pigeons seldom produce more than two young ones at a brood. but they in some measure repay the smallness of the number by the frequency of their hatching. They will have young ones twelve or thirteen times in a year, provided they be properly looked after, and well fed.

Pigeons must be kept clean; for, though they make a great deal of dirt, they are not fond of it. Their properest food is tares, or white peas, and they should have clean water set in different places, and some gravel scattered about their house. You must carefully preserve them from vermin, and their nests from starlings and other birds, as the latter will suck their eggs, and the former entirely destroy them.

As the conimon or dove-cote pigeons are very hardy, and will live in the severest weather, they have the advantage of many other kinds. If the breed should be too small, it may be mended by putting in a few tame pigeons of the most common kind, and the least conspicuous in their colours, that the rest may the better take to them from their being more like themselves. In proportioning the sexes among pigeons, good management is required : for there is nothing more hurtful than having too many cocks, especially if you keep the larger or tame kind. By having too many cocks, a good dove-cote may be spoiled, as they will grow quarrelsome, beat many away, and thereby thin the dove-cote.

The walls of the dove-cote are best built with elay mixed with straw, and while they are wet, it will be easy to cut such holes in them as may be thought necessary. However, let the cote be erected of what materials it may, the outside should be frequently whitewashed, which will make the building more easily remembered by the pigeons, and thereby keep them from straying.

Pigeons being very fond of salt, lay a large heap of clay near the dove-cote, and let the brine done with in the family, be frequently beaten among it. It should be made thin, and kept so by frequently mixing brine with it. Salt is of much more advantage to pigeons than merely the pleasing them, for nothing will recover them so readily from sickness; a mixture of bay salt and cummin seed being an universal remedy for most diseases to which pigeons are subject.

The backs and breasts of pigeons are sometimes apt to be scabby, which will kill the young, and make the old ones so faint, that they cannot take their flights. To cure them of this disorder, take a quartern of bay salt, and as much common salt, a pound of fennel-seed, a pound of dill-seed, as much cummin-seed, and an ounce or two of assafetida. Mix all these together with a little wheat flour, and some fine worked clay. When it is well beaten together, put it into two pots, and bake them in an oven. When they are cold, lay them longways on the stand or table in the dove-house, when the pigeons will peck it, and every appearance of their disorder will soon vanish.

Rabbits.

A TAME rabbit is a very fertile animal, as she brings forth young every month. The doe must be put to the buck as soon as she has kindled, otherwise she will destroy her young. The sweetest hay, oats, and beans, sowthistle, parsley, cabbage leaves, and such like, always fresh, are the best food you can give them. If you do not be careful to keep them clean, they will soon poison themselves, and every one who approaches within the smell of them.

APPENDIX TO THE LADY'S ASSISTANT.

THE MANAGEMENT OF THE DAIRY.

CLEANLINESS is one of the most necessary articles, to be attended to in the management of the dairy, which the housekeeper should entrust the care of to one who is conversant in those matters. The most essential matters to be observed in this business, are as follow:

After paying every attention to neatness and cleanliness, it will be necessary to see that the cows be milked at a regular hour ;- for the detention of the milk will not only keep the cows in great pain, but will contribute to spoil them. They should not be milked later than five in the evening, that their bags may have time to fill by the next morning ; and every time they are milked their udders should be properly emptied.

The milk should be well strained as soon as it is brought into the dairy, and emptied into clean. pans... White-ware pans are the best, as they are of a superior cleanliness, the brown sort being very porous, and are with difficulty cleansed by any scalding.

To make Butter.

UNLESS butter be very fresh, and free from rancidity, it cannot be wholesome, as bad bufter will liurt digestion, render, it difficult and painful, and introduce much acrimony into the blood. As soon as the butter is churned, open the churn, and with both hands, gather it well together, take it out of the butter-milk, and lay it in avery clean bowl or earthen pan. If the butter is designed to be used fresh, fill the pan with clear water, and work the butter in it backward and forwards. till'it is brought to a firm consistence of itself, without any moisture. Having done thus much, scotch and slice it over with the point of a knife, every way as thick as possible, in order to draw out the smallest Eair, bit of rag, strainer, or any thing that may have by chance fallen into it: Then spread it in a thin bowl, and work it well together with as muchisaltas you think proper, and make it up into what form your please. -Should the milk of any particular cow happen to be foul or corrupt, owing to any accidental injury of the teats, it must by no means be mixed with the sweet milk, but given to the pigs. During the hot. summer months, the cream should be skimmed from the milk before the dairy gets warm from the influence of the sun: nor should the milk at that season stand longer in the pans than twenty-four hours, nor be skimmed in the evening till after sun-set. Milk may remain unskimmed for thirty-six or thirty-eight hours in winter.

A deep pan must be ready to hold the cream, which should be kept, during the summer, in the coolest part of the dairy, or in a cool cellar, where a free air is admitted, which is much better. In the hot we a ther, you must not omit to churn twice a week, and this should be done very early in the morning. More labour will be required to churn butter in winter than in summer. The butter-milk which remains after the butter is churned, is esteemed as an excellent remedy in spring for consumptive complaints.

APPENDIX TO THE LADY'S ASSISTANT.

To make Cheese.

THE quality of cheese differs according to the manner in which it is made. Cheese may be made from new or skimmed milk, from the curd which separates of itself upon standing, or may be more speedily produced by the addition of rennet. As soon as the milk is turned, carefully strain the whey from the curd. Break the curd well with your hands, and when it is equally broken, put it into the vat by degrees; observing carefully to break it as you put it in. The vat must be filled an inch or more above the brim, in order that the curd, when pressed down, may not shrink below the brim, as, in that case, the cheese will be spoiled. Before the curd be put in, a cheese cloth or strainer should be laid at the bottom of the vat; and this must be so large, that when the vat is filled with the curd, the end of the cloth may turn over the top of it, and completely cover the whole.

It must, in the next place, be taken to the press, and there left for two hours. It must then be turned, and have a clean cloth put under it, and turned over as before. After this it must be pressed again for six or eight hours, when it must again be turned, and rubbed on both sides with salt. It must then again be pressed for twelve or fourteen hours more, when, if any of the edges project, they must be pared off. It must then be turned every day on a dry board.

The rennet may be prepared in the following manner. Take the rennet or maw-bag of a calf, and be careful that it be perfectly sweet; for if it be in the least degree tainted, the cheese cannot be good. Take three pints or two quarts of soft water, clean and sweet; put into it some salt, some sweet briar, rose-leaves, cinnamon, mace, cloves, and almost every sort of spice and aromatic that can be procured. Boil these gently in two quarts of water till the liquor is reduced to three pints, and be careful not to make it smoky. Strain the liquor clear from the spices and other matters, and when it has stood till it be only milk-warm, pour it upon the calf's maw. You may then, slice a lemon into it, and let it stand a day or two; when it must be strained, and put into a bottle for use. It will keep good a twelvemonth, if it be properly corked. It will smell like perfume, will give the cheese a pleasing flavour, and a small quantity of it will turn the milk.

To make Cream Cheese.

TWELVE quarts of new milk must be put to a quart of cream; let the milk and cream be just warm, and put to it a quantity of rennet sufficient to turn it. When you find the curd has come, lay a cloth in the vat, which must be made of the size proportionate to your intended cheese. Cut out the curd with a skimming-dish, and keep putting it into the vat till you have filled it, turning the cheese-cloth over it. As the curd settles, lay more on, till you have laid on as much as will make one cheese. As soon as the whey is drained out, turn the cheese into a dry cloth, and then lay upon it a pound weight. Turn it out at night into another cloth, and the next morning salt it a little. Then lay it on a bed of nettles or ash-leaves, and cover it with the same, shifting it twice a day, for ten days. It will be fit to send up to table in that time.

To make Sage Cheese.

BRUISE the tops of young red sage in a mortar till you can press the juice out of them. Bruise also some spinach leaves, and having squeezed out the juice, mix it with that of the sage, in order to give it an agreeable green colour, which the juice of the sage alone will not do, and the bitter taste of the sage will thereby be considerably corrected.

Having prepared your juice in this manner, put the rennet to the milk, and at the same time mix it with as much of the sage and spinach juice as will give the milk the colour you would wish it to have, putting more or less, according to the taste you intend to give it. As soon as the curd is come, break it gently, and when it is all equally broken, put it into the cheese vat or mote, and press it gently, which will make it eat tender and mellow. Let it stand in the press about eight hours, then salt it, turn it every day for about a month, and you may then send it to table.

To make Marygold Cheese.

TAKE some of the freshest and best coloured marygold leaves you can procure, pound them in a mortar, and strain out the juice. Put your juice into the milk at the same time you put in the rennet, and stir them together. As soon as the milk be set, and the curd come, break it as gently and as equally as you possibly can, put it into the cheese vat, and press it with a gentle weight, there being at the bottom of the vat a number of holes sufficient easily to let out the whey. The remainder of the process is the same as before directed.

To imitate Cheshire Cheese.

AS soon as the milk is set, and the curd is come, do not break it with a dish, as is generally done in making other cheeses, but draw it together with your hands to one side of the vessel, breaking it gently and regularly; for if it be pressed roughly, a great deal of the richness of the milk will go into the whey. Put the curd into the cheesevat or mote as you gather it, and when it is full, salt it at different times, press it, and let it frequently be turned.

These cheeses must be about seven or eight inches thick, and will be fit to cut in about twelve months. Put them on a shelf, frequently turn them, and rnb them with a dry coarse cloth. At the year's end, you may bore a hole in the middle, and pour in a quarter of a pint of sack, then stop the hole close with some of the same cheese, and set it in a wine-cellar for six months to mellow. You will then find the sack all lost, and the hole in a manner closed up. This cheese will have a pleasant and grateful flavour, and eat exceedingly fine and rich, if it be properly managed.

THE MANAGEMENT OF THE KITCHEN GARDEN.

IT cannot be expected, that a housekeeper should be a working gardener; but it is proper that she should know how to judge whether the gardener does his duty properly or not. The following few remarks will make her a tolerable judge of this matter, and will enable her to know what she has every month to expect from the produce of the garden. We shall now proceed to consider the business of every month.

January.

Though vegetation makes very little progress in the garden during this month, yet there are now many things necessary to be attended to for the production of vegetables in the succeeding months. You may now begin to sow and plant, in natural grounds as well as hot-beds, radishes, spinach, lettuce, carrots, peas, beans, parsley, cauliflowers, cabbages, mushrooms, kidney-beans, asparagus, small salading, &c. Though these may be sowed in the natural grounds, yet that must be in the warmest corners, and gently covered every night with warm mats, and also in the day-time, when the weather is severe.

Any time this month you may sow cucumbers in a hot-bed, in order to produce early fruit in March, April, and May, and a sufficient quantity of hot dung must be prepared for that purpose. The hot-bed must be made a yard high, for one or two light frames, and must be earthed six inches thick with rich mould. Sow some early prickly cucumberseed half an inch deep, and when the plants have come up, and the seed-leaves are half an inch broad, prick them into small pots, four in each, and put them into the earth of the hot-bed, observing from the beginning to have proper air, by tilting the lights at top one or two fingers breadth. The glasses must every night be covered with mats, an occasional watering given them, and, when the heat of the bed decreases, the sides of it must be lined with hot dung. When the cucumbers are advanced in growth, with the rough or proper leaves one or two inches broad, they may be then transplanted to a larger hot-bed, and there remain till they produce fruit.

The full-grown crops of celery must now be earthed up, and some of the endive tied up every week to blanch. Sow a little carrot-seed towards the end of the month, and plant horse-radish, by cuttings from the offset roots of the old ones. Set them in rows two feet asunder, and about fifteen inches deep, that they may obtain long straight roots. Now earth up your artichokes, dig between them, and lay the earth along the rows, so that the plants may be surrounded by it. Radishes, and other tender plants, sown in borders, must be constantly covered with straw till they come up; and even after they are come up, if the weather be frosty, they must be covered with straw every night.

February.

This month will require great attention to the kitchen garden, as now are beginning the early efforts of vegetation. All the vacant ground must now be dunged, digged, and trenched, and made ready for sowing and planting. You may sow early crops on south borders, and some main crops in the open quarters, such as radishes, pease, beans, spinach, lettuce, onions, leeks, cabbages, carrots, parsnips, beets, coleworts, savoys, brocoli small salading, parsley, chervil, borage, fennel, dill, burnet, clary, cresses, mustard, rape, &c.

Full crops of peas may be sown at the beginning, and towards the latter end of the month, of the best bearers, or such as are most esteemed: Beans of different sorts may be sown in rows, a yard distant from each other. Sow cauliflower-seeds in a hot-bed, or in a warm border, or under a frame, to plant out in April or May, to succeed those plants that the winter produced.

You may begin sowing the first main crop of carrots, if the weat ther be mild, in an open situation, in light rich ground trenched two spades deep. Scatter the seed moderately thin, and rake it in regularly. Sow also onions, leeks, parsnips, spinach, and beet.

Some of the strongest cabbage plants may be transplanted into an open quarter of good ground, in rows, one, two, and three feet distant, to cut young, and at half and full growth. Plant, in rows a foot distant, cabbage plants of the sugar-loaf and early kinds.

You may now sow parsley for a main crop, both of the plain leaved and curled sorts, either in a single drill, along the edge of borders or quarters, or in continued drills eight or nine inches asunder. Give air to the plants in hot-beds, as also to those under frames and glasses, by either tilting the glasses two or three inches, or, in mild and dry days, drawing them up or down half way; but towards night you must be careful to cover them up again, or they may be all spoiled in one night.

March:

The gardener's work increases fast upon him this month, as he must now finish all his dunging, digging, and trenching. He must now prepare for the main crops of onions, leeks, carrots, parsnips, red beet, green beet, white beet, spinach, lettuce, cabbage, savoys, cauliflowers, brocoli, colewort, asparagus, beans, peas, kidney-beans, turnips, parsley, celery, turnip-cabbage, and turnip-radish; also all sorts of salads and sweet herbs, cresses, mustard, rape, radish, marjorum, nasturtium, borage, marigolds, chervil, thyme, savory, coriander, corn-salad, clary, fennel, and angelica, and others of that class.

It will require great care and attention in the gardener, to see that the seeds are quite fresh, which is a matter of great consequence, and for want of which many are disappointed in their principal crops, when it is too late in the season to sow again. Be careful to sow your different crops in dry weather, and while the ground is fresh dng, or levelled down, or when it will admit of raking freely without collecting into lumps.

Such cauliflower plants, which have stood the winter in frames or borders, should now be planted out, if the weather be mild, in welldunged ground, two feet and a half distant, and draw earth to those remaining under the glasses. Give air to these and your melon and cucumber plants; but remember to cover your glasses with mats every night.

Towards the decline of this month, you may plant potatoes for a full crop, in lightish good ground, some of the early kind for a forward crop in summer, and a large portion of the common sorts for the general autumn and winter crops. Plant your main crop of shalots by offsets, or the small or full roots, set in beds six inches apart. Sow a successional and full crop of spinach twice this month, of the roundleaved kind, in an open situation; or it may be sown occasionally between two rows of beans, cabbages, cauliflowers, horse-radish, artichokes, &c. As the weeds willspring up plentifully this month, good attention must be paid to destroy them as soon as they appear, either by hand or hoe, as all your crops will be ruined, if you suffer them to increase.

'April.

Whatever part of your planting or sowing was omitted last month must be finished in the beginning of this. The main crop of the red and green borecole must be sown, in an open situation, to plant out in May and June, for autumn, winter, and the supply of the following spring. You may likewise sow, for the first general autumn crop, some of the purple and cauliflower sorts of brocoli.

The early dwarfkinds of kidney-beans should now be sown in a warm border, as also some speckled dwarfs; and a large supply in the open quarters, in drills two feet, or two and a half distant. Sow different kinds of lettuces, for succeeding crops, two or three times this month.

Your melons in hot-beds must now be carefully attended. Train the vines regularly, give them air daily, with occasional moderate waterings. Keep up a good heat in the beds, by linings of hot dung, and cover the glasses every night.

Full crops of peas for a succession of marrowfats may be sown once a fortnight, and also of other large kinds. Sow the seeds for all sorts of pot-herbs, and plant aromatic herbs, such as mint, sage, balm, rue, rosemary, lavender, and such like, either by young or full plants, as conveniency best suits.

Successional crops of radishes may continue to be sown every fortnight, in open situations, in order to have an eligible variety, young and plentiful. Sow a principal crop of savoys in an open situation, detached from walls, hedges, or any other impediment, that the plants may be strong and robust for planting out in summer, to furnish a full crop well cabbaged in autumn, and for the general winter supply, till next spring, this being a most valuable cabbage in autumn and winter, as frosty weather will not hurt it.

May.

The principal business of this month is to sow and plant several succession crops of plants that are of short duration, and others of a more durable state. Weeding, hoeing, and watering, must now be properly attended to. Top your early beans that are in bloom, to make the pods set soon and fine; and do the same thing by the succeeding crops as they come in flower.

Thin and cleanse your carrots from weeds, either by hand-weeding or small hoeing, leaving those you intend to draw young in summer four or five inches apart; but the main crops must be thinned six or eight inches. Hoe between your rows of beans, peas, kidneybeans, and all other plants in rows, not forgetting your cauliflowers, and to draw the earth to the stems.

The spring-sowed crop of lettuces must now be thinned, and you must plant out proper supplies of the different sorts at a foot distance. The spring-sowed crop of onions must now be weeded, and thinned where too thick. You may continue, once a fortnight, to sow marrowfats, and other large kinds of peas; also some of the best hotspurs, or other sorts that are esteemed, to furnish a regular succession of the different kinds. You may likewise continue to sow radishes in open situations, once a week or fortnight, in moderate quantities, which will serve this and the following month for successive crops.

Lettuces, cresses, mustard, radish, and the different sorts of salading, may be sowed this month, to have a proper succession to cut while young. Plant out some of the strongest early savoy plants, in an open situation, two feet and a half as under, for autumn and winter. You may continue to sow, in open situations, some round-leaved spinach.

During the dry weather of this month, the new-planted crops will require frequent watering, both at the time of planting, and occasioually afterwards, till they have taken root. Also water the seed-beds of small crops lately sowed, or young plants, in very dry weather. Weeding must be very diligently attended to both by hand and hoe; for as weeds will be rapidly advancing among all your crops, it will become a principal business to eradicate them before they get to too great a head. A garden over run with weeds is a great disgrace to a gardener.

June.

In the course of even this month, many successional and main crops must still be sown or planted for autumn and winter; and as to the crops now advancing or in perfection, no small share of the gardener's labour will be taken up in hoeing, weeding, and occasional watering.

Cabbage, brocoli, borecole, savoys, coleworts, celery, endive, lettuce, cauliflowers, leeks, beans, kidney-beans, and various aromatic and pot-herbs, may be planted in the open ground, by slips, cuttings, or young plants. Showery weather is by far the best either for sowing or planting, and no time should be lost in putting in the necessary crops, when such weather presents itself. Keep your asparagus-beds very clean from weeds, and hoe your artichokes. Plant successional crops of beans in the beginning, middle, and latter end of this month, some Windsor, long pods, white blossom, and Mumford kinds, which must be carefully kept from weeds.

It will now be the time to plant the first main crop of celery in trenches to blanch. The trenches must be three feet distant, a foot wide, and the earth must be digged out a spade deep, laying it equally to each side in a level order. Then dig the bottom, and if poor, add rotten dung, and dig it in. Draw up some of the strongest plants, trim the long roots and tops, plant a row along the bottom of each trench, at four or five inches distance; and let a good watering finish that business.

Let the cucumbers in hot-beds have every day plenty of air, and water them two or three times a week, or oftener, if the weather be hot; but continue the glasses over them all this month. They must be shaded from the mid-day sun, and still covered on nights with mats. Sow a full crop of them, in the beginning of the month, in the natural ground, to produce picklers, and for other autumnal purposes.

The main crops of the curled endive must now be sown, also a small supply of the white curled, and large Batavia endive; each thin in open ground, to plant out for autumn and winter. Sow more marrowfat peas, and some hotspurs or rouncivals, and other large kinds. You must now pay attention to your potatoes, loosen the ground, and draw the earth round them at the bottom.

The crops now remaining of carrots, parsnips, onions, and such like, will require to be hoed, or transplanted at proper distances.

July.

In the course of this month, the gardener must catch the opportunity of moist or showery weather for sowing and planting. Several successional crops are required to be sown this month for the supply of autumn, and some main crops for winter consumption. Several of the principal crops will now be arrived to full perfection, and some mature crops all gathered. When the latter is the case, the ground must be cleared for succeeding crops, or for some general autumn and winter crops, as turnips, cabbages, savoys, brocoli, celery, and other articles of that nature.

You may now gather your aromatic herbs for drying and distilling, such as spearmint, peppermint, balm, pennyroyal, and such like, most of which, when just coming into flower, are in best perfection for gathering; but some must remain till they are in seed, as fennel, dill, and angelica.

You may now plant the last crop of beans, for the late production in autumn. They must be of the smaller kind, as they are most successful in late planting, such as white blossom, green nonpareils, small long pods, &c. putting in a few at two or three different times in the month; and also some of the larger kinds, to have the greater chance of success and variety. Soak the beans in soft water six or eight hours, if the weather be dry, and water the ground along the rows; but remember to plant them thin.

A main crop of the purple and white brocoli may now be planted in good ground, two feet and a half asunder, to produce small heads at the end of autumn and the following spring, Cauliflowers, that were sown in May, must be now planted out into rich ground, two feet and a half distant from each other, for the Michaelmas or autumn and winter crop. Earth up the stems of young cabbages, savoys, brocoli, borecole, beans, peas, kidney-beans, &c. to strengthen their growth; and also earth up celery plants to blanch.

The principal late crops of kidney-beans, of the dwarf kind, may now be sown for autumn supply, and more for latter successional production in September and the following months. Sow them all in drills, at two feet, or two feet and a half distance. If the weather be very hot and dry, either soak the beans, or water the drills well before you sow them. Continue to plant out different sorts of lettuces, at a foot or fifteen inches distance from each other. Water them well at the time you plant them, and plant them in shallow drills, and they will preserve the moisture longer.

Some of the early crops of potatoes may now be dug up for use, but take no more at a time than you want; for, as they are not yet at their full growth, they will keep but a few days.

August.

Part of this month must be employed in sowing the winter and the next spring and early summer crops, such as cabbages, cauliflowers, enions, carrots, spinach, and some principal crops plauted for late autumn and winter supplies. All new-planted articles must be watered, and due attention must be paid to eradicate the weeds before they grow large and come to seed, which, if they are suffered to do, will over run all your garden.

In the course of this month, your artichokes will arrive at full perfection. You must now earth up the former planted crops of celery, repeating it every week, according as the plants advance in growth. Cucumbers in frames may now be fully exposed by removing the glasses; and picklers, or those in the open ground, will now be arrived at perfection. Those intended for pickling, may be gathered while young twice or thrice a week. Water the plants daily, while the weather continues hot; and in dry weather, hoe various crops in rows, to kill weeds, loosening the earth about them, and drawing some to the stems to give them strength and vigour.

The onions being now come to their mature growth, and full bulbed, should be pulled up in dry weather, and spread in the sun to dry and harden, for a week or fortnight, frequently turning them to ripen and harden for keeping. Having cleared them from the gross parts of the stalks and leaves, bottom fibres, any loose skins, earth or such like matters, you may house them on a dry day, and keep them for use as wanted.

You may now sow winter onions, both of the common bulbing and Welch kinds, for the main crops to stand the winter, to draw young and green, some for use in that season, but principally for spring supply; and some of the common onions also, to stand for early bulbing in the summer. The common onion is mildest to eat, but more liable to be cut off by the frost, than the Welch onion, which is so hardy as to stand the severest weather; but this never bulbs, and is of a stronger hot taste than the other.

An autumn crop of radishes, both of the common short top and salmon kinds, may now be sown. Likewise ternip-radishes, both of the small white, and the red, for autumn, and the principal crop of black Spanish for winter. The prickly-seeded, or triangular-leaved spinach, must now be sown for the main winter crop, and for next spring, that sort being the hardiest to stand the winter. Sow some in the beginning, but none towards the latter end of the month, in dry and rich ground exposed to the winter sun, and where there are no trees or buildings to shade it.

Ripe seeds must be gathered in dry weather, when perfectly ripe, and beginning to harden. Cut up or detach the stalks with the seeds thereon, and place them on a spot for a week or two where the sun has the greatest power. Then beat or rub out the small seeds on cloths, spread them in the sun to harden, then cleanse them, and put them by for use, in some place where neither dirt nor damp can get to them.

September.

All the principal sowing and planting necessary this year end with this month. Some for the successional supply of the present autumn and beginning of winter, others for general winter service, and some to stand the winter for the succeeding spring and summer months.

Nothing is now to be done with artichokes, but to break down the fruit stem close, according as the fruit is gathered, and hoe down the weeds among them. Asparagus now requires only to have the large weeds cleared out till next month, when the stalks must be cut down, and the beds winter dressed. Cauliflowers that were sowed last month for next year's early and main summer crops, should now be pricked out in beds, three or four inches distance, watered, and to remain to October, when some of them may be planted out under hand-glasses or in frames.

You may now plant out more celery in trenches, and earth up all former planted crops, repeating it once a week, two, three, or four inches high, or more. Plantout also full crops of the two last months sowing of coleworts, at a foot distance, for winter and spring supply. Potatoes will now be advanced to some degree of perfection for taking up in larger supplies than hitherto, but not any general quantity for keeping; for they will be better at the latter end of next month than at present.

It will now be time to think of making your mushroom beds for the principal supply at the end of autumn and winter, this being a proper season for obtaining plenty of good spawn, which is found in all places where horse-dung and litter have been of any long continuance, and moderately dry, as in horse-rides, under cover in livery stable vards, in horse-mill tracks, where horses are employed in any kinds of manufactories, in working machines and mills under cover, and under old hay stacks; in all which places the spawn is found in cakes or lumps, abounding with small white fibres, which is the spawn. The bed must be thus formed and situated. Mole it in a dry sheltered situation in the full heat of the sun. Let it be four or five feet wide at bottom, in length from ten, twenty, or thirty, to forty or hfty feet or more, and four or five feet high, narrowing on each side gradually till they meet at top in form of a roof of a house, that it may more readily shoot off the falling wet, and keep it in a dryish temperature. In the course of a fortnight or three weeks, when the great heat of the bed is reduced, and become of a very moderate warmth, the spawn is then to be planted, in small lumps, inserted into both sides of the bed just within the dung, five or six inches distance, quite from bottom to top, beating it down smoothly with the back of a spade; then earth the surface of the bed all over with fine light mould, an inch or two thick. Cover it with dry straw or litter, after it has stood a week, to defend the top from rain. Let it be covered only half a foot thick at first, and increase it by degrees till it is double that thickness. This will complete the business; but the covering must be kept on constantly night and day. In a month or six weeks mushrooms will begin to appear, and great plenty will be produced soon afterwards.

October.

Peas, radishes, and lettuces, for early production next spring and summer, and small salading for the present supply, is all the sowing that is required this month. Cut down the stems of the asparagus in the beds of last spring, hoe off the weeds, dig the alleys, and strew over the beds some of the earth.

Your crop of carrots, which was sowed in the spring, being now arrived at full growth, must be taken up towards the latter end of the month, for keeping in sand all winter. Cut the tops off close, cleared from earth, and when quite dry let them be carried under cover, and placed in dry sand, or light dry earth, a layer of sand and carrots alternately. You must now clear from weeds, and thin where too close, your carrots sowed in July and August.

The rotten dung of old hot-beds inay now be employed in manuring your ground where it is required, especially where the handglass crop of cauliflowers, and early cabbages, are intended to be placed. Continue to tie up full-grown plants of endive, in dry weather, every week to blanch. Plant endive for the last late crop, in a warm border.

Horse-radish may be dug up now as wanted, it being at its full growth. Parsnips, which are now also full grown, may be dug up, and laid in sand, in the same manner as before done with carrots. Potatoes, being also now full grown, may be all dug up, and housed in some dry close place, thickly covered with straw, so that no air nor moisture may come to them. If they be carefully housed, they will keep all winter, and will be very serviceable till other things come in season.

Several sorts of seed plants should now be planted, as cabbages and savoys, divested of the large leaves, and put in by trenching them down to their heads, two feet distant; also carrots, parsnips, turnips, and red beet, all of full growth, cutting the tops off near the crown, and planting them two feet distance, with the heads one or two inches under the surface of the earth.

November.

The business of this month must be digging and dunging the ground for the benefit of future crops. Aromatic plants, in beds and borders, should have the last thorough cleaning from weeds and litter, and the beds dressed to remain in decent order for the winter. Vacant ground must be digged one or two spades deep, and, if you dung it, dig it in a spade deep, laying the ground in rough ridges to improve by the weather, till wanted for sowing or planting with future crops. Dig up some roots of horse-radish to preserve in sand, that it may be ready for use when that in the ground is frozen up.

Jerusalem artichokes, which are now in their full perfection, may be treated in the same manner. Defend your mushroom beds night and day with dry straw, or long dry stable litter, a foot thick, and put mats over all as a security against rain and cold.

December.

The principal business to be done in the kitchen garden this month is dunging and digging the ground, and laying it in ridges to enrich for sowing and planting after Christmas, with some principal and early crops for the ensuing spring and summer.

Your asparagus hot-beds will require diligent attention, to keep up the heat of the beds by linings of hot dung, and to admit air in mild days to the plants that are come up, by opening the glasses two or three inches behind; but shut them close on nights, and cover the glasses with mats. In all moderate weather give air to your cauliflowers in frames and hand-glasses; pick off all the decayed leaves, and destroy slugs, if any infest the plants. Take up your red-rooted beet on a dry day, and let them be placed in sand, under cover, for use, in case of hard frosts. Hoe earth to the stems of your borecole. and brocoli on a dry day. Whatever vacant ground you have, dig it in ridges trench-ways two spades aside, and one or two spades deep. If dunged, dig in the dung, but one spade, leaving each trench in a rough ridge, to remain for future cropping, that it may improve by the weather, and be ready for levelling down expeditiously for the reception of such plants and seeds as shall be committed to its fruitful bosom in the succeeding months.

THE MANAGEMENT OF THE FRUIT GARDEN.

HAVING already given such particular directions for the management of the kitchen garden, we shall not have occasion to be so particular respecting the fruit garden, as many observations we have already made are applicable to both.

January.

The business of this month, in the fruit garden and orchard, is to prepare for and plant such fruit trees as are intended; to prune and nail wall and espalier trees in general, and standard trees where nocessary.

Trees of one, two, or three years old, are proper ages for planting, and these may be had at public nurseries, as well as those more advanced and trained to a bearing state for immediate bearers. Care must be taken, that they be removed with their full spread of roots as entire as possible. Prune broken parts and long stragglers, and any very irregular branch in the head. When you plant them, dig a wide aperture two or three feet over, and one deep, or more or less, according to the size of the roots. Fill the earth in regularly about them, from three or four to five or six inches over the uppermost roots, and fread it evenly and gently thereto, first round the outside, then gradually towards the middle, and close round the stem of the tree, which will complete that business.

You must now prune your vines, which bear only on the young wood, the last summer shoots being the proper bearers. Take out most of the last year's bearers, and all the naked old wood. Nail the vines to the wall as soon as pruned, arranging the general branches and shoots from eight to ten or twelve inches distance. Prune also your peaches, nectarines, apricots, apples, pears, plums, and cherries, on walls and espaliers; and also currants and gooseberries.

February.

In the course of this month, the ground must be prepared for planting, by proper digging and trenching, and improving it with dung, fresh loam, or compost, where necessary. A compost of good loam, common earth, and good dung together, is excellent for fruit tree borders. General planting of fruit trees may be now performed in open, mild weather, but particularly those sorts most required. Standard-tree planting in any kind of fruit trees, may now be performed in open weather, in gardens or orchards, principally of apples; pears, plums, and cherries, for the main collection, especially most of the two former, for family supply during the course of the year.

Plant the trees from twenty or thirty to forty or fifty feet distance; the moderate growers closer in proportion, such as the codlin, common cherry tree, plum, &c. Dwarf standards, with low stems, from one to two or three feet, may be planted in borders, fifteen or twenty feet distance, in different varieties and species. Your wines must now be pruned and nailed, as directed last month.

March.

The principal planting and pruning of all kinds of fruit trees must be finished early in the beginning of this month, as the trees will now be advancing in their buds and blossoms. In planting the different fruit trees, observe the proper distances for wall trees, espaliers, and standards, and give caeh a good watering to the earth, to settle it close about the roots and fibres, and to promote their striking afresh into the ground.

Be careful, in frosty weather, to shelter wall trees in blossom, such as apricots, peaches, and other early fruits, by nailing up large mats on nights before the trees; or oceasionally on days, when the frost is severe, and no sun to protect the young fruit now in embrio, and its generative organs in the centre of the flower. Propagate fig trees by layers, cuttings, and suckers of the young shoots. Plant vine cuttings of the young shoots, two or three joints long, immersed in the ground to the uppermost eye or bud. Plant suckers and cuttings of the several sorts of fruit trees that produce them, for new plants and stocks to bud and graft upon. This is the proper season for grafting on apples, pears, plums, cherries, quinces, and medlars.

April.

The new-planted trees must be moderately watered in dry weather, about once a week. Divest young budded and grafted trees of all shoots from the stock below the bud or graft. If any webs of caterpillars now appear on any fruit trees, clear them off before they spread, to prevent the insects from devouring the advancing leaves. Defend early wall trees now in blossom and young fruit, particularly apricots, peaches, nectarines, and others of the principal kinds, continuing to nail up mats in frosty nights. Rub off uscless buds in early shooting wall trees, as peaches, nectarines, and apricots. Their shoots will now be advancing : rub off close the fore-right ones, and others where too numerous, and such as are ill-placed or unnecessary.

. May.

The business of this month is nearly similar with that of the last, and consists principally in disbudding and pruning. The operation of summer pruning, at this early period, is performed without a knife; the buds being tender, the useless growths are easily disbudded, or detached with the finger and thumb, by rubbing them elose off to the old wood. Go over peaches, neetarines, and apricots, and rub off all the fore-right and other ill-placed shoot buds of the year. Displace also, in a thinning order, part of the superfluous shoots, where evidently too numerous in any parts of the trees, and the remaining shoots, when of due length, train in elose and regular.

You must also go over the vines, which will be now advancing in numerous shoots, and displace all the improper and ill-placed shoots of the year, particularly those emitted from the old wood, where not wanted, and the weak and unfruitful straggling shoots wherever you find them. All the coverings must now be discontinued and removed away from wall trees defended while in bloom and setting their fruit. Wall fruit, as apricots, nectarines, and peaches, must be thinned where set too thick or in clusters, retaining the most promising fruit at moderate distances, from three or four to five or six inches as under. Do not omit to water new planted fruit trees in hot dry weather, giving each about a watering pot of water once a week or fortnight, during the month, or till they are properly rooted in the earth.

June.

The principal business of this month consists in summer pruning and nailing the fruit trees. Begin the summer pruning of the earliest shooting kinds of wall trees, as peaches, nectarines, apricots, vines, cherries, plums, pears, apples, and such like, to displace the foreright and other ill-placed shoots, and nail in all the regular placed side or terminal shoots to the wall. Prune out all the ill-placed branches from fig trees, advanced in the present year's summer shoots, and nail the side shoots and terminal ones to the wall.

Thin apricots, peaches, and nectarines, where too thick or inclusters, thinning out the smallest, and leaving the most promising singly, at moderate distances, saving the apricots and nectarines thinned off for tarts. Currants trained against walls and espaliers, must now be divested of all superabundant shoots to admit the sun to the fruit. Gooseberries and currant bushes in standard, if very crowded with shoots of the year, prune them where thickest, to admit the sun to ripen the fruit with proper flavour.

July.

This month will continue to require great attention to the summer pruning, and nailing in all wall and espalier trees, both in continuance of the former regulations, and more particularly in those not done, to regulate the numerous shoots of the year, by displacing those improper and superfluous, and to nail and train the young wood in regular order to the wall and espalier, and according as they advance in length to train them along close, always at their full length all summer.

You must now also continue to thin apricots, peaches, and nectarines, if they be still too close. Regulate and nail vines, and prune and nail fig trees, these having now made numerous strong shoots. Prane apples, pears, plums, cherries, and currants, and defend ripe wall fruit from birds and insects; the former by nets, and the latter by placing phials of strong liquor and water, or water sugared, to emit an odorous smell, to decoy wasps and flies from the fruit. Keep raspberries cleared from all straggling succours of the plants, between the rows, or at a distance from the main stools, and hoe down weeds:

August.

Great attention must be paid to the wall and espalier trees in the course of this month. Displace all useless young wood that may prevent the sun ripening the fruit, which will be now getting to a state of maturity. Gather-ripe apricots before they become too soft and mealy tasted. Train and fasten in all the requisite supply of proper shoots close to the wall and espalier in regular order, and as they advance in strength without shortening, both to preserve the necessary regularity of the trees, to admit the sun and free air to improve the supply of young wood to perfection, and for the advanced fruit to have all possible benefit of the sun to accelerate its ripening in a regular manner, in the fullest state of perfection, and richness of flavour.

The choicest sorts of wall fruit, that are now ripening, must be defended from birds and insects by the methods before mentioned. If they be annoyed by ants, place cuttings of Spanish or common reed, hollowed elder, or any thing of a hollowed pipe-like kind, in which they will harbour, and there may be destroyed in a very easy manner.

• September.

Summer pruning in wall and espalier trees being by this time pretty well completed, nothing in any great degree of that operation will now be wanted, except adjusting any disorderly shoots that project from the wall, or have sprung from their places, or training along any that have extended in length, or to reduce others that have overtopped the walls, or run considerably out of their limited space, so as to keep the whole in perfect regularity, and that the full sun may be admitted to ripen the fruits of the season, which are now haftily advancing to maturity.

This being the principal ripening season of the grapes, the vines must be particularly attended to, as in this country they require every possible assistance of the sun, by still keeping the vines cleared from all improper shoots, and nailing the others along close and regular to the wall, to admit the sun's warmth in full power, equally to the ripening grapes, that they may acquire perfection before the autumnal cold and wet commence, and ripen with their particular richness and flavour. Such grapes as are fully ripe must be guarded from wasps or birds, by putting some of the best bunches into bags of fine paper, or rather of thin gauze or crape, that will admit the sun, and keep off birds and insects.

October.

A proper attention to the gathering of all winter fruits, is the most material business of this month, particularly apples and pears for keeping; and the several autumnal fruits, for present supply, according as they ripen, and the late wall fruits. Gather apples and pears, now of full growth, both of the autumnal eating, and winter-keeping kinds, all on dry days. All the autumnal kinds, and those designed for keeping, should be gathered by hand. Apples are proper, both for present use, and to keep several months; but of the winter pears few are fit for immediate eating, only for stewing, and such like purposes. They ripen to perfection as they lie in the house, sooner or later, according to the different sorts, from next month, and December, till March and April, and the late ripeners will sometimes keep till May or June.

November.

The business of this month is to finish the gathering of such fruits as are still out; and all intended planting of fruit trees must be forwarded, this being an eligible season for transplanting most sorts, walls, espaliers, and standards; also for the general operation of winter pruning and nailing.

The planting of standards may now be performed in all the hardy fruits, in their different varieties, as apples, pears, plums, cherries, mulberries, medlars, quinces, services, filberts, all the hazle-nut tribe, barberries, bullaces, damsons, almonds, and walnuts; likewise the Brussels and Breda apricot in a warm situation; all which may be planted in kitchen gardens, pleasure grounds, orchards, &c. always allotting the fullest supply of the most useful kinds, as apples, pears, cherries, plums, &c. and planted from twenty or thirty, to forty or fifty feet distant from each other.

Winter pruning must now be forwarded in all kinds of fruit trees, particularly wall trees, and espaliers in the general annual regulation, both among the young and old branches. This general pruning is indispensably necessary in all wall and espalier trees every year in winter, any time from this month till March, to preserve their requisite regularity within their limited bounds, and their proper fruitfulness.

December.

We are now come to the last month in the year, the principal business of which in the fruit garden is much the same as in the last; that is, if the weather be open to prepare ground, where necessary, to plant with any kind of fruit trees that may be wanted, or intended for planting this or the two following months, when the weather admits; but it is adviseable, for fear of a severe frost, to finish the principal planting early in the month, at least all that is intended before Christmas.

Pruning may be continued all this month, when convenient, and standard tree planting may now be forwarded in open weather. Orchard trees may also be planted, such as apples, pears, plumbs, and cherries, in full standards, thirty, forty, or fifty feet square, to form straight ranges each way. Espalier tree planting may be performed in apples or pears, at fifteen or twenty feet distance; plumbs, cherries, quinces, or medlars, at fifteen feet distance from each other.

In the course of this mouth, apples, pears, and quinces, put by for keeping, must be occasionally examined, and such as are decayed or rotten must be removed. They must be kept closely covered with straw, a foot thick at least, for if any damps get to them, they will soon be all spoiled.

THE END.
